DEMOCRATS AGREE TO LIMIT POWERS OF F.D.R. ON RELIEF

Two Sections of Measure
Scheduled for Elimination

Senate Committee Fight
After Stormy Session.

FINAL ACTION SET BY GROUP TODAY

Administration Adherents
Successful in Retaining Lump Sum In-act for President.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Led by Carter Glass, senate appropriations committee democrats today agreed to amend sections of the $4,800,000, 000 work relief bill which would give President Roosevelt power never before possessed by a peace-time executive.

Before any actual change in the bill takes place, however, the full committee must ratify it. Nevertheless, approval at a meeting of the full committee tomorrow appeared certain unless some insurgent democrats changed their minds and decided they were not bound to vote for the modifications.

Two sections were scheduled for elimination. If they go, it goes the power for the president to change emergency government agencies as he sees fit and to acquire real property by right of eminent domain.

For all the seeming show of defiance, administration adherents, headed by Senator Byrnes, democrat, South Carolina, were successful in retaining the $4,800,000 lump sum intact for Mr. Roosevelt to distribute as he sees fit.

Enough Authority Claimed.
They claimed, in addition, that plenty of authority was retained to enable the president to administer the act as he desires.

Republican members, led by Senator Dickinson, republican, Iowa, were determined, however, to restrict—if they can—distribution of the funds through existing agencies. Some further limitations may be put on President Roosevelt's power tomorrow.

The executive's followers in the conference let it be known privately that they expect to regain some of the authority for Mr. Roosevelt after the senate acts and the bill goes to conference.

The house staged a mild revolt, but in the end granted most of the things wanted by the White House.

It was pointed out that White House pressure might bring a change overnight.

But if the modifications desired by Senator Glass are made the changes will include:

Elimination of presidential authority to use money to relieve "economic maladjustments."

Restriction of expenditure of funds to public works projects "of a type such as is or may be authorized by law" thereby preventing any possible taking over of private enterprise without authority of congress.

Elimination of provisions to permit the president to expend funds regardless of existing laws governing federal expenditures that come under the inspection of Comptroller General McCarr.

Elimination of a provision to permit the president to employ workers without regard to civil service act of 1923.

Eradication of provisions for the president to consolidate, redistribute, abolish or transfer the functions, duties and responsibilities of any executive department or agency.

$20,000 Candler Zoo Offered As Gift to City

Asa G. Candler has offered his private zoo to the city of Atlanta as a gift, it was announced by Mayor Key Tuesday. If the Candler collection is accepted it will be added to the city zoo at Grant park and will make that institution one of the finest in the United States.

Only one condition was attached to the gift by Mr. Candler, that proper housing for the valuable animals and rare birds be provided. Many of the animals have their own habitat in tropical lands and are, therefore, somewhat delicate in Atlanta's climate.

It will cost not less than $15,000 to provide the needed quarters for the Candler collection and Tuesday Mayor Key issued a statement in which he requested The Constitution and other Atlanta newspapers to conduct a campaign to raise that sum. With careful economy it is estimated that $15,000 will be sufficient.

Mayor Key, while anxious to accept Mr. Candler's generous offer, feels that it should involve no outlay of city funds, but rather that the necessary cost be met by voluntary contributions. That this easily can be done, through the co-operation of the city, he is confident.

SENATE ADOPTS BILL CURTAILING REGENTS' POWER

Measure Passes, 32 to 6.
House Begins Debate of
Speaker Rivers' $5,000
Home Exemption Plan.

Recessing early in order to clear the way for the address by Senator Huey P. Long, the senate and the house of representatives continued their high speed action Tuesday, the former body adopting the amended bill of Governor Talmadge to curtail the powers of the board of regents and the latter beginning debate on the proposal of Speaker E. D. Rivers for a $5,000 tax exemption on owner-occupied homes, a measure which seems assured of passage by the lower branch when the vote is taken today.

The regents' bill was approved by a vote of 32 to 6 after the senate had accepted an agreed amendment under which the regents instead of the governor obtain control of athletic fees and receipts from athletic contests.

In addition to taking up the Rivers tax exemption plan the house voted to table the Talmadge proposed constitutional amendment which would authorize the governor to limit the length of an extra session in his call for that session. The vote on this measure was 88 to 50, and was taken on motion of Representative J. H. Flynn, of Spalding county, an opponent of the amendment, and Representative H. B. Edwards, of Lowndes county, administration leader, who declared that he didn't care whether or not the amendment is submitted as Governor Talmadge's final term of office will expire before the people have had an opportunity to vote.

Relief Committee Approved.
Before taking up the Rivers proposal the house adopted a resolution of Representative H. H. Watson, of Paulding county, authorizing the appointment of a senate and house committee of five members to go to Washington to learn if Georgia can participate in the $4,800,000 relief program being sponsored by President Roosevelt.

Watson declined to say why he wanted the investigation, but he commented on the federal relief program, saying there are several bills before congress requiring parallel state legislation in order for Georgia to participate in the vast sums to be expended. He also said the pension and special insurance proposals in congress would be of interest to the Georgia legislature.

Governor Talmadge has long been at odds with the federal relief setup and has frequently assailed phases of the New Deal administration.

Only one representative, Charles M. Howard, of Chattahoochee, took the floor against the relief proposal, saying he favored President Roosevelt's policy but that he saw no reason to put additional expenses on the state government.

Exemption Seen as "Defiance."
Some representatives looked upon the home tax exemption issue as another defiance of Governor Talmadge's edict not to pass any additional taxes, saying that he meant he wanted the legislature to let taxes alone.

Speaker Rivers said it would create a barrier against communism and "encourage home ownership." Several others endorsed his proposal in speeches while Paul Lindsay, of DeKalb, spoke against it.

Under the first pension measure to exempt personal property valued up to $500, and said he expected to equalize the loss in state revenue through a sales tax and other proposals.

"Big Boys" Should Share Wealth, Huey Shouts, Hitting F. D. R. Plans

By L. A. FARRELL.
Down around Winfield, Winn parish, La., when Huey Long was a boy the folks used to give barbecues and invite the countryside. Meat and bread and sauce and sometimes polliwog was prepared for all expected. And if anyone ran off with the victuals Huey's elders would fetch them back and make them return the food that didn't belong to them.

"The Lord has given America one grand, big barbecue and sent meat and bread and sauce and polliwog for all. But the Morgans, the Melons, the Baruchs, the Fords and the big guys have taken a great deal more of their share and not left very much for most of the little fellows, the same Huey Pierce Long, now the distinguished senior senator from the state and claimed the Bible backed up every Georgia legislator and just about as many folks that could cram their way into the hall of the house of representatives Monday.

All of the members of the house were not present to hear the Kingfish's speech, but most of them were, even a large number of the representatives who voted against the resolution in the morning. There was a sprinkling of senators, too. But the general public came en masse and were more than gratified that some of the solons turned up their noses at Huey.

The Kingfish was in all of his glory. He quoted at length from the Bible and claimed the Bible backed up every Georgia legislator and just about as many folks that could cram their way into the hall of the house of representatives Monday.

HIKE ADVOCATED IN TAX ON COTTON

Move Urged To Raise Domestic Price of Staple to 20 Cents.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(UP)—Increase of the cotton processing tax to raise the domestic price to 20 cents a pound was advised today by J. E. McDonald, agricultural commissioner of Texas, testifying before the senate agricultural committee.

The present internal price is 12 1/2 cents, 4 cents of which is made up by the processing tax. This is somewhat above the world price.

Senator John H. Bankhead, democrat, Alabama, indicated opposition to an increase in the tax, saying "spinners are already complaining that the existing processing tax is a big burden, and bringing in the use of cotton substitutes."

Excess production of cotton, McDonald said, could be sold abroad at a profit.

McDonald criticized the cotton reduction program.

Cab Driver Says He Saw
Four Men Near Cemetery on Night Condon
Paid $50,000.

By JOHN FERRIS.
FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A Brooklyn restaurant cashier and former cabaret "host" told the jury in the Bruno Richard Hauptmann trial today that, while keeping a tray in a darkened automobile April 2, 1932, he saw Isidor Fisch, Hauptmann's furrier friend, jump from the wall of St. Raymond's cemetery.

That is where Dr. J. F. Condon paid the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom money.

Vague later on identifications of the surroundings and unwilling to name the girl in the tray, now dead, Benjamin Heier clung to his story that he flicked his automobile lights on and off and that in their glare he saw for about five or six seconds the man the defense says got the Lindbergh ransom cash.

Bundles Peddled.
Earlier in the day, Edward J. Reilly, chief of the defense counsel, attempted to show through a woman witness that Fisch had attempted to peddle bundles which may have held ransom notes.

State objections halted the testimony but gave Reilly the chance to announce:

"I am prepared to prove that the man who peddled the bundles was Isidor Fisch, that the money was paid to Isidor Fisch, that Isidor Fisch from that date on not only approached one but many persons in New York, trying to dispose of this money."

"I am going to trace everything I can to show that Isidor Fisch and not this defendant received the money from Dr. Condon, tried to dispose of it, tried to leave it not only with this woman (Mrs. Bertha Hoff), finally left it with Hauptmann, and the development of the innocence of this defendant."

Mrs. Bertha Hoff, a little woman in a brown hat and a black dress, testified a New Jersey farmer named Rudolph and Isidor Fisch had come to her home in Bayville, L. I., late in 1933 with bundles.

Testimony Halted.
State objections choked off her testimony and brought Reilly's exposition of the case, opening the way for Heier's testimony.

Again court was adjourned early, as five defense witnesses failed to answer Reilly's loud voice.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard rebuked Reilly with the admonition he must not "talk back" in the courtroom.

During the day more friends of Hauptmann came to the stand to present testimony contradicting that of Dr. Condon and Isidor Fisch had come to her home in Bayville, L. I., late in 1933 with bundles.

Dr. Condon's reputation was attacked in question and answer by E. Seykora, a department of justice inspector, but the inspector upheld "Jagie's" character by his testimony.

Heier swore in the courtroom that he sat in a parked automobile a hundred feet or so from where Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was waiting outside St. Raymond's cemetery, on the

F. D. R. REBUKES LABOR'S COUNSEL

Criticism on Renewal of Auto Code Draws Sharp
Letter in Reply.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—The split between the administration and the American Federation of Labor was widened measurably today when President Roosevelt pointedly told the organization that some decisions concerning labor were for him alone to make.

The president spoke directly of the automobile labor board headed by Leo Wolman, pointing out that it was for him to say whether the board was fulfilling its duties and should be continued.

A letter containing this statement was his answer to the federation's demand that the board be abandoned because, the A. F. of L. said, its employees elections and the method of collective bargaining it provided were illegal.

The release by the White House of an exchange of correspondence between the president and Charlton Ogburn, federation counsel, regarding the board, was a surprise.

SOLONS URGE BAN ON HOLDING UNITS

Elimination Within Five Years Approved at White House Parley.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Legislation designed to eliminate public utility holding companies within five years was agreed upon tentatively late today at a White House conference.

The accord was reached only after a heated session between advocates of federal regulation and proponents of a levy that eventually would tax holding companies out of existence.

Although a division of opinion exists in administration and congressional circles on the subject, identical bills to place utility holding companies under federal regulation will be introduced in the senate and house tomorrow.

Chairman Rayburn, democrat, Texas, of the house interstate commerce committee, and Chairman Wheeler, democrat, Montana, of the senate interstate commerce committee, will bring forward the measures.

Final details of the measures are to be worked out tomorrow. Meanwhile, advocates of a tax on holding companies are planning to have a separate bill introduced to impose a levy to bring in revenue to the treasury.

The tax rate, however, has not been decided upon.

Besides Wheeler and Rayburn, others attending the White House conference today included Secretary Morgenthau, Attorney General Cummings, and members of the federal power, trade and securities commissions.

Several of the conferees conceded privately that there was a wide division of opinion among those attending. For a time it appeared that proposed regulation would be junked.

83-Year-Old Briton To Wed Fourth Time

LONDON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Sir James Heat, 83-year-old colliery proprietor, filed notice in a registry office today of his intention to marry for the fourth time. The bride will be Dorothy Mary Hodgson, 35, of Hampshire.

Sir James' third wife was Sophie Mary Elliott-Lynn, who flew alone from Capetown to London in 1928. This marriage was dissolved by divorce in Reno, Nev., in 1932.

SPLIT IN CABINET ON SECURITY BARED

Debate Between Morganthau and Perkins Taken to Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Differences between Secretaries Perkins and Morganthau—which were carried to the White House in an attempt at compromise—were disclosed today when the latter asked congress to make important changes in the administration's social security bill.

The amicable intra-cabinet debate revolved around one of the recommendations which Morganthau made to the house ways and means committee on economic security inment—that upward of 8,000,000 farmers, domestic servants and "casuals" or transients should not get compulsory old-age pensions.

Secretary Morganthau contended that collecting taxes from these classes would be a terrific task, but Secretary Perkins and the president's committee on economic security insisted that farmers, domestics and casuals should be left in.

Lacked Approval.
Unable to agree, they decided to let Morganthau present the recommendation in the treasury department. Heier swore in the courtroom that he sat in a parked automobile a hundred feet or so from where Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was waiting outside St. Raymond's cemetery, on the

FLOYD HAMILTON SEIZED UNARMED

Brother of Raymond and Aid of Slain Clyde Barrow Captured.

SHREVEPORT, La., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Floyd Hamilton, youthful desperado and pal of the southwest's most notorious outlaws, was quietly arrested while seated in a bus here tonight.

His capture was in marked contrast to the hectic pistol battle in which he and his brother, Raymond Hamilton, escaped local and federal officers at Dallas yesterday.

"Don't shoot," young Floyd said as two deputy sheriffs entered the bus and poked guns at his midsection. "I haven't got a gun."

Floyd is under federal indictment on charges of aiding and abetting Clyde Barrow, the notorious bandit who was slain in north Louisiana last spring with his gun-woman companion, Bonnie Parker.

Had $500 in Cash.
Floyd, officers said, was suspected of helping his brother yesterday in the hijacking of the bank at Carthage, Texas. The brothers miraculously escaped a hail of bullets when they were ambushed at a Dallas apartment last night.

Ames Granted Divorce From June Knight

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The brief marital union of Paul Ames, wealthy New York stock broker, and June Knight, stage and screen actress, was terminated today as Ames was granted a decree of divorce by Circuit Judge H. P. Atkinson.

The suit, filed by Ames yesterday, charged cruelty and asserted that the couple had lived together only nine days since they were married last fall.

No information was forthcoming as to the terms of the divorce other than a statement by attorneys that an amicable property settlement had been made.

My Cookery News Notes

By RUTH CHAMBERS

Editor's Note: The writer is Ruth Chambers, staff member of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, recognized authority on cookery of all kinds, and especially meat cookery and the planning of meals around the meat course. Experimental cookery has developed a good deal of new information about cooking meat, which is contrary to old ideas. This series of articles will give our readers this new information in helpful form, and will also give a series of excellent recipes and suggestions for serving the meat course of the meal.

BLUE PLATE MEALS FOR HOME SERVICE

Did you ever think that a "blue plate dinner" like they serve in restaurants would save you a lot of trouble at home? Of course, a blue colored plate is not necessary to this type of service—it can be any color at all. I wonder how a main course served on one plate came to be called a "blue plate dinner." Perhaps the first of those plates with the partitions was blue. At any rate, a main course on one plate has much in its favor. It saves dishes, saves effort, and is very attractive.

At least it should be attractive or it will defeat its reason for being. Arrangement and selection are the pass words to a good looking plate dinner. The foods should go well together. This is a good way to serve some of those famous food affinities, like pineapple and lamb chops, immortalized in apple and lamb chops, immortalized in Hollywood; or individual steaks and fried bananas. And don't forget color contrasts! Brighten the plate with a sprig of parsley or a strip of pimiento; and don't over-crowd. Sometimes salad is placed on the plate, too, but personally, I don't believe in mixing hot and cold in this way. A relish, yes, if you wish—pickles, olives, or spiced fruits, perhaps.

No "Soupy" Foods! And "soupy" foods are quite out of order. They don't stay put; they infringe on the rights of others. Creamed potatoes or other vegetables had better be planned for another meal. Gravy with the meat is not so good either. And go slow on the sauces for the same reason. Tomato sauce may be a grand invention with a real chop but we don't want it run wild all over the plate. Hollandaise sauce is different as we do not use so much of it.

Potatoes on the half shell, French or cottage fried potatoes fit in nicely. So do those delicious slices which have been sprinkled with grated cheese and dotted with butter and browned under the broiler flame. A baked potato, too, has a place on the plate lunch but it should be split open and butter added so that it may be eaten right from the shell.

Some "Naturals." Most any meat can be served with other foods on a single plate, but there are some that just seem to belong. Fillet mignon is one of these. It may be accompanied by asparagus, fresh or canned, according to the season. I like to place the asparagus in a little bundle and lay a strip of pimiento across its middle. Dress it up with Hollandaise sauce or melted butter. Rice, too, is a good food to include on a plate luncheon as a starchy food. It looks pretty and is easy to serve. Lamb chops, pork chops, an individual serving of broiled ham, sausages—link or patty—yes and croquettes or hash, especially baked hash, all are excellent choices for this type of service.

Good Company Luncheons.

The one plate meal is very well adapted to the service of a company luncheon when one must be hostess and maid. We all admire the ability of the woman who can prepare and serve a delightful meal, but who does not have one eye and most of her mind in the kitchen; one who is able to make us feel that after all the meal is only incidental to the occasion. A well thought out blue—or yellow or green, if you will—plate lunch will help to achieve that nonchalance to which we all aspire as hostesses. And here are some suggestions for meals that will look and taste good when served on one plate. I do not mention desserts or salads so you may fill in as you wish, and of course they are not really a part of our "blue plate special."

WORTHY TESTIFIES AGAINST DEKRASNER

State's Star Witness Tells of Participation in Many Fake Claims.

Sam Worthing, the state's star witness in the trial of prosecutions growing out of an investigation of alleged fake damage claims, took the stand in the superior court Tuesday as a witness in the trial of Norman DeKrasner, second Atlanta attorney to go on trial as a result of the investigation, and told a story similar in many respects to the one he told Monday when R. F. Turnipseed, another attorney, was tried and convicted on three misdemeanor counts.

Worthing told freely of his participation in numerous fake claims and told the jury that DeKrasner had suggested to him that "they could make some money" by bringing false claims against the power company. Worthing said that he himself paid $5 to a relative by marriage, A. W. Wilhoit, to sign the name of "John Jagers" to a fake claim against the Georgia Power Company which was settled for $150. The witness said that he went to the company's offices and got the settlement check and delivered it to DeKrasner, and that he was given $47 as his "commission."

In addition to the "Jagers" case, DeKrasner is charged with an attempt to defraud the power company in another claim allegedly filed in the name of "Robert Gilbert." Worthing told the jury that he signed the Gilbert name with his left hand to a blank claim and that he did not have anything further to do with that claim, in which no money was actually obtained.

Mrs. Edna Wilhoit testified that DeKrasner had "started" to file a claim for her at one time against Taylor Baking Company, and that she had seen him and told him she had never been in such an accident and that the company did not owe her anything. Mrs. Wilhoit said that she had not known anything of DeKrasner's preparations to file a claim in her name until told by other parties. Under cross-examination the witness admitted that at one time she had authorized the filing of a suit by an-

House Committee Kills Birth Control Measure

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Legislation to authorize the dissemination of birth control information was killed today by the house judiciary committee.

The committee, by a 15-to-8 vote, disapproved a measure by Representative Pierce, democrat, Oregon, on which extensive hearings were held last session.

Similar legislation has been before congress off and on for many years, with Margaret Sanger leading the campaign for its enactment.

other attorney against Kress & Company, which she said was a "frame-up."

The state rested its case at 5:30 o'clock, and a recess was taken until 8 o'clock this morning.

Judge Worrell deferred sentence in the Turnipseed case until the end of the week, after the disposition of other similar cases.

PROGRESS IS REPORTED BY SCOUT PRESS CLUB

The Atlanta Boy Scout Press Club Tuesday announced that a large majority of its members have made good progress toward securing the journalism merit badge. Merrill Lienhart, president of the club, has taken the lead in this direction, it was announced.

The club meets weekly in the auditorium of the Atlanta Gas Company. They discuss the problems of writing news and the progress they are making on their merit badges. John Kernan, one of the members, addressed the last meeting. He spoke on "A Hike That Ended in a Flop."

three Atlanta papers, was the opinion expressed by the mayor Tuesday. 150,000 Dimes Sought.

Mayor Key suggested that the needed $15,000 could be quickly and easily secured if 150,000 Atlantas would give one dime each. There is hardly an Atlanta, man, woman or child who cannot spare ten cents for this purpose and who will not be more than simply repaid when he or she visits Grant park and enjoys seeing the great collection of animals.

Mayor Key said Tuesday he felt it would be entirely proper to ask every child in Atlanta's schools to contribute one dime each.

"Such a collection as the Candler zoo is of particular interest to children," he said. "They get a great deal of enjoyment out of the animals and their visits to the zoo are also of high educational value. I feel that it would be altogether the right thing for every child in Atlanta, from the youngest through those in the high schools, to give their dimes to bring this collection to the city. They are undoubtedly the ones who will enjoy the zoo the most and gain the greatest benefit from it."

Elephant Fund Raised.

Mayor Key recalled that some years ago, when the elephant then at Grant park died, The Constitution conducted a campaign among the city's children to raise sufficient funds to buy another elephant, the animal that was the pet of the entire city, known as "Maude." It is an interesting coincidence, also recalled by the mayor, that when Maude herself died she was replaced by the present animal, "Coco," given to the city by Mr. Candler.

With this in mind, Mayor Key issued his statement asking all three Atlanta papers to aid in the campaign to raise the $15,000 needed for the fund. "I feel that with all three papers combined in this campaign the needed money should be raised in a short time."

"Zoo" Banks To Be Obtained.

Lewis F. Gordon, public relations director of the Citizens & Southern National bank, who has been named treasurer for the fund, Tuesday night said that plans were under way to obtain a number of toy banks in the forms of different animals, monkeys, lions, elephants, etc., and distribute them among the various city and county schools, asking the children to act as agents for the fund and get as many people as possible to drop dimes in these "zoo banks."

Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, of the city schools, was out of the city, but Mr. Gordon said he had been assured that Mr. Sutton would extend every possible co-operation to the campaign. It is understood there is a ruling by the board of education against direct solicitation of funds in the schools, he believed, there would be no objection to asking the children to take the "zoo banks" and act as agents in getting them filled with dimes.

Mr. Gordon also said he planned to have larger banks of the same type placed in all the stores for contributions from the public and to have them displayed at meetings of the civic clubs, etc.

Larger Gifts Welcome.

Mr. Gordon pointed out that while the campaign will be entirely limited in dimes, that does not mean no one can contribute more than 10 cents. In fact, he said that a number of pledges for much larger sums have already been received.

"The 150,000 dimes slogan," he said, "simply means that the man who gives $50 will be credited with giving 500 dimes. There is no limit on the number of times any one individual can contribute. In fact every one should give according to their ability."

Superintendent Jere Wells, of the Fulton county school system, expressed himself as in hearty sympathy with the campaign and said he would take up with the county board of education this afternoon the question of asking the pupils in the county schools to assist in the drive.

Added Maintenance Expense.

There will be, of course, some added expense for maintenance after the Candler collection is added to the present zoo. Mayor Key is insistent that no zoo costs be borne by the city itself and he believes that a plan can be worked out, possibly by presentation of circus stunts by such of the animals that have been taught to do tricks, for which a small admission could be charged on certain days, to meet this added cost.

The Candler zoo, now housed on the Brincliffe road estate, is valued at more than $20,000 and is rated as the largest and finest private collection of animals and birds in America. Included among its population are five elephants, six trained ponies, one camel, one black leopard, one laughing hyena, two pumas, one leopard, one lion, two tigers, one white lion, one white zebra, one white elk, two Asiatic elk, four buffalo, seven bears, including two polar bears, six deer, four llamas, one African sheep, four alligators, one sealion and approximately 100 birds of rare species.

Constitution Glad To Help.

The Constitution is glad to take part in this campaign to add such a splendid collection of animals to the zoo at Grant park. Efforts recently have been made by several other cities to purchase the Candler collection and it was felt, both by Mayor Key and Mr. Candler, that this city should not let the Brincliffe animals get away.

It was this thought and the spirit of generosity to his home city that actuated Mr. Candler in his offer and it was a similar desire on the part of Mayor Key that prompted him to make the conditional acceptance.

Now it all depends upon Atlanta's citizens, individually, if the Candler gift is to be finally and fully accepted.

Let everyone promptly send in the contribution so that Atlanta can join in the grateful chorus of thanks to Mr. Candler and, through their gifts, let him know how thoroughly the citizens appreciate his big-hearted generosity.

Long Becomes Talmadgeite
By Donning Red Suspenders

When Governor Talmadge campaigned he made something of an issue of red suspenders. Here are the governor (left) and Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana. Huey says "me, too," as he sticks his thumb through red suspenders he just has traded his old ones for with Herman Talmadge, the Georgia chief executive's son. They were photographed Tuesday in Huey's room at the Ansley hotel. Associated Press photo.

Senator Huey P. Long hadn't been long in Georgia before he accepted the fashion of the day and donned a pair of red suspenders, the badge of a Talmadgeite.

Huey got his suspenders from Herman Talmadge, the son of the governor, who was serving on the reception committee. Herman was using them himself, he believed that a plan could be worked out, possibly by presentation of circus stunts by such of the animals that have been taught to do tricks, for which a small admission could be charged on certain days, to meet this added cost.

made his headquarters during his stay here, he got to joking with Governor Talmadge about what he is going to do when he becomes president.

"I'm going to make Governor Talmadge the secretary of agriculture," he confided. "I don't like that guy Wallace, anyhow."

A copy of a telegram sent by two Georgia state senators to President Roosevelt apologizing for action of the Georgia house of representatives in inviting Senator Long to Atlanta was shown the Louisiana "Kingfish" today, who was "too busy to even read it."

The text of the telegram: "As state senators in the Georgia state assembly representing your neighboring district, we wish to apologize to our great president and neighbor for the action of the lower house in inviting the honor of the great state of Georgia, your other home, by inviting the greatest demagogue of all times, the Kingfish of Louisiana, to address that body today."

The senator and his escort were as anxious to get to the capitol for the speech as was the crowd there waiting to hear it.

When he went to introduce the speaker, Representative Williams cut it off short.

"Huey Long don't need an introduction to any audience in Georgia," Williams said. "He has never spoken here before but we all know him well."

For a moment, the senator's official bodyguard, was reported on the sick list, but he brought two more along. These were given a brief holiday as the Atlanta police gave him all the protection he needed, and more.

"Share the Wealth" Club To Be Organized Tonight

The Atlanta "Share the Wealth" Club will be organized at a meeting to be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Ansley hotel, Gerald L. K. Smith, of Baton Rouge, La., an associate of Senator Huey P. Long, announced Tuesday night.

"Senator Long told me that he was gratified with the response to his address in the house of representatives here today and instructed me to remain over and establish a club here," Smith said. "We hope to get 100,000 members in Georgia in the next year."

corrected themselves and admitted that there were 19,000,000 out of jobs when I got on the radio and called their hands," he said.

Roosevelt Policies Hit.

"Well, under Roosevelt what have we done," he went on. "We have plowed up the cotton while thousands have cried for cotton goods. We have poured milk into the rivers while babies pleaded for it and we have killed hogs all over the country while millions were starving. That's a very poor way to share the wealth."

Right then Long inserted the one charge of his whole talk.

"There is no harm so deceiving as luxury," he shouted. "In Louisiana and in Georgia, everywhere, there are men elected to high office who forget the common people who put them there as soon as they get what they want themselves."

Governor Talmadge was the first to start applause to this thrust and in a minute it was taken up by the entire audience.

With that Huey produced his remedy.

"It's a capital levy," he shouted. "If a man has a million dollars we'd take one per cent of it in addition to the taxes we have today. If he has two million we'd take two per cent. If his wealth is three million we'd take more and so on up to the eighth million and we'd take 100 per cent of that."

Yield of $150,000,000,000.

"Do you know how much such a capital levy would yield? It would yield just about $150,000,000,000 and with that we could see that those who have nothing in this land of plenty would have their share. I think that every man who is out of jail ought to have a decent job and a decent home and a few of the comforts of life. We'd limit inheritances to $5,000,000 and we'd limit incomes to $1,000,000 a year. We would have more millionaires but there wouldn't be any billionaires."

The senator painted a rosy picture of what the capital levy would do. It would, he said, provide roads and schools and colleges for everyone. Maybe it would cut everyone's work to five days a week, six hours a day for the first year and maybe less thereafter. Maybe it would cut the working months of the year from 12 to 10.

It would provide unemployment insurance, but, according to the senator, there wouldn't be much need for such insurance and it would provide old age pensions.

All Would Own Homes.

All in all everybody would own their own home, free from debt, and have a car and a radio and maybe about $5,000 on hand in cash.

Bill Seeks Election
Of Municipal Judges

Election of the judges of the Fulton division of the Atlanta municipal court by the people is provided for in a bill introduced in the house of representatives Tuesday by the Fulton county delegation. Senator Millican is understood to be in accord on the measure.

Under the terms of the bill the terms of Judges T. O. Hatchcock and Clarence Bell, which expire at the end of this year, are extended until January 1, 1939 in order that they may run in the general election next year and the terms of the other three judges which expire January 1, 1938, are extended until January 1, 1939 in order that they may run in the general election of 1938.

The bill provides that the county board shall fix the salaries of the judges but the chief judge is limited to $8,400 yearly and the associate judges to $7,500 yearly. Chief Judge Luther Z. Rosser now draws $7,500 a year and the associate judges draw $6,600 a year.

cotton merchant, testified that the increase in production abroad had been greatly exaggerated.

"Brazil has received an enormous publicity from sales of just a few hundred thousand bales," he said. "This might be propaganda by those in favor of big crops in this country."

O'Donald proposed the following plan as his solution to the "cotton problem":

1. End government intervention in cotton;
2. Unlimited production;
3. Peg the price for one year at 15 cents per pound;
4. Form a cotton council to make loans to farmers and plan campaigns to sell American cotton abroad.

Senator E. D. Smith, democrat, South Carolina, chairman of the committee, criticized American business men for shipping machinery abroad to develop cotton industry in competition with the United States.

"We've got just sense enough to be as poor as we are," Smith said. "That's what's the trouble with America."

"If we could just get more people interested in the prosperity of the entire country instead of the prosperity of some individual or group, we could solve this problem."

"The country has been bled white by the tariff," Smith added. "It's called patriotism to help industry, but when it comes to helping the farmer, that's treason."

RAMSPECK TO ATTEND
GRANITE CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Atlanta, today said he would attend the meeting called for tomorrow night by Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, at which the question of inducing the government to include granite in its specifications for proposed new public building construction, would be discussed.

As the representative of the Georgia fifth congressional district, which contains Stone Mountain, the producer of the finest granite quarried in the country, Mr. Ramspeck said he would gladly join with representatives from other granite producing states in an appeal to Rear Admiral Christian Peoples, director of procurement, treasury department, to include in building specifications granite as well as limestone or other stone materials.

Mr. Ramspeck said that while discussion at the meeting would be limited to granite, he would favor the inclusion of marble as well.

"Georgia quarries both granite and marble of the highest quality," he said, "and I can see no reason why discrimination should be shown as between the two."

that time and his brow was perspiring freely.

He was thankful that he had an opportunity to speak in Georgia where he understood that some of the representatives had voted against inviting him.

His bodyguards hustled through the crowd to the speaker's stand and in a minute or two he was gone to Washington, where he says he'll renew his demand for the highly desirable capital levy in a few days.

automobiles under an act of 1933, to the common schools.

Probe to Continue.

Dobbins heads a house committee investigating the sales, and said the probe would continue, although he found the money was in the treasury credited to the board of education but not disturbed.

Speaker Rivers put in two measures, one providing state distribution of free basal textbooks, and another giving the state direct control of public schools seven months out of the school year, which would make it a law for schools to operate a minimum of seven months a year.

Adoption of the regents' bill in the senate was accompanied by spirited debate. Lamar Rucker, of Athens, referred to "pitiful Louisiana," saying Louisiana State University had been thrown into politics and that he hated to see the same thing happen in Georgia.

The senate adopted a bill designating a highway from Columbus to the Florida border as the military highway, and recommended to a committee a $2,000 to $2,500 homestead exemption measure.

Also recommended to committee was a bill defining the powers of the public service commission, to provide for 20 days' notices on rate hearings in accordance with the federal Johnson bill.

Keep System Clean During Flu Epidemic

Nothing makes a person so susceptible to colds and other serious ills as a clogged-up intestinal tract, because this condition weakens the system as a preventive of sickness.

"Keep the bowels open" is the warning of physicians at this time, "but don't defeat your own purpose by using purgatives so harsh that they leave your system in an exhausted condition."

Right now, while colds are so prevalent, Dr. Hitchcock's All-Vegetable Laxative Powder is especially recommended as a preventive of sickness. It leaves no after effects of depleted energy, because it is an all-vegetable laxative—gentle, yet thoroughly efficient. It tones up the intestinal tract and is actually invigorating in its effect.

FISCH ACCUSED BY DEFENSE AGAIN

Witness Says He Saw Isadore in Cemetery on Ransom Night.

night of April 2, 1932, and saw Fisch jump from the cemetery wall.

Lindbergh May Return.
His testimony made it appear likely the state would call Colonel Lindbergh as a rebuttal witness to refute the story a car was parked outside the cemetery on the night Dr. Condon issued the $50,000 ransom to a man the state contends was Hauptmann.

The witness, young, self-proclaimed, describing himself as a writer, now working as a cashier, said he sat in his automobile near the gate of St. Raymond's for two hours with a girl who married a short time later and died soon afterwards.

He told his story in a straight forward manner, but in cross-examination by Attorney General David T. Wilentz various inaccuracies cropped up as Heier strove to remember details of his physical surroundings.

He said incidentally Lindbergh nor Condon mentioned a parked automobile when they testified.

Fisch is the man, Hauptmann says, who left in his keeping a shoe box which he inspected last August to discover it contained nearly $15,000 of the Lindbergh ransom money.

Answers Are Vague.
Heier was vague in many of his answers to Wilentz's rigorous examination. He hesitated about revealing the name of the girl. He admitted to a conviction on a charge which was not brought out in examination.

He was vague, too, when he tried to describe the street condition where he parked, the street lights and the state of the cemetery wall near the spot where Lindbergh has testified he heard a voice, which he identified as Hauptmann's calling "Hey, doctor!"

Lindbergh spent his twenty-fifth day in court, listening to the testimony with no greater show of emotion than he has evinced since the beginning. He watched Heier intently, taking note of every word.

Heier was the latest of the defense surprise witnesses. He came to the stand at the start of the afternoon session after Mrs. Maria Mueller, niece of Mrs. Hauptmann, and five other persons had testified they were present at the Hauptmanns on the night of December 2, 1933, when Fisch was guest at a farewell party. Fisch sailed for Germany shortly afterwards and died there the following spring.

Mrs. Mueller also corroborated Hauptmann's own story that he was at home on the night of November 26, 1933, when, the state contends, he passed a ransom bill at a Greenwich Village theater.

State Witness Assailed.
The defense also produced a witness to testify that the memory of Mrs. Cecile Barr, cashier at the theater, was faulty—she was the woman who identified Hauptmann as the ransom bill passer—but he was not permitted to answer defense counsel's questions.

Last Friday, the defense put on the stand Peter H. Sommer, a former New York city fingerprint expert, who testified he saw a man and a woman the night of the Lindbergh kidnapping on a street car in New York city.

The woman he identified from photographs as Violet Sharpe, the Morrow maid who ended her life during the kidnapping investigation. The man he named as Fisch. The woman, Sommer said, had a baby with her. On cross examination, Sommer said of the photograph identifications "I wouldn't say yes and I wouldn't say no."

Seeking further to implicate Fisch in the kidnapping, the defense called Mrs. Bertha Hoff, housewife in Brooklyn who formerly had lived in Bayside, Long Island.

Visited by Fisch.
Mrs. Hoff's story was that late in 1933, "around Thanksgiving," she was visited by the New Jersey farmer Budreau and Isador Fisch, whom she had not known previously.

But she had known about 10 years and in the summer of 1931 she and her children spent four weeks on his farm near Lebanon, N. J., which is about 12 miles north of Flemington and about 20 miles from the Lindbergh Hopewell estate.

They came, she said, to her home in Bayside, Long Island, a suburb of New York city.

Reilly asked, "Did Isador Fisch have any bundles with him?" Mrs. Hoff answered, "Yes, he did."

Reilly then asked Mrs. Hoff to describe the bundles "or what else he had with him."

That brought strenuous objection from Wilentz and developed the defense thesis that Fisch left the ransom cash with friends before returning to Germany where he died last year.

Possession of Bundles.
"It is our proposal to show by this witness, if we are permitted, that certain bundles, one of which was deposited with the defendant Hauptmann, at the time of the farewell party—they tried to leave, or Fisch tried to leave the bundles, and the suit cases with this woman in October or November, 1933, shortly before the Hauptmann party; and I think it is material to show that he was in possession of those bundles, that the witness could not be connected with the alleged bundle Hauptmann testified Fisch left with him."

Heier testified.
Reilly rejoined with an exposition of his case that Heier developed in his testimony.

"Now if the court please," Reilly said, "we might just as well face the issue, after the attorney-general has summed up to the jury."

During the day, I am prepared to prove, if my witnesses come from New York, that the man who jumped over the cemetery wall was Isador Fisch, that the money was handed to Isador Fisch, that Isador Fisch with that date on not only approached one but many persons in New York, trying to dispose of this money."

"I am going to trace every connection of Isador Fisch with this money until he left on the steamer."

"I hope to be able to prove by witnesses when he arrived in Hamburg his actions before the immigration authorities in Germany."

"I am going to trace everything I can to show that Isador Fisch and not this defendant received the money from Dr. Condon, tried to dispose of it, tried to leave it not only with this woman but other people, finally left it with Hauptmann, and the development of the innocence of this defendant."

Wilentz Confident.
Wilentz retorted "There will be no such credible proof. I feel very confident for the state. I can find no fault with counsel's statement he is going to try to do it, and I have no objection to his declaration here for the benefit of the jury either, because he is going to be called upon to prove his statements."

Justice Trenchard excluded the question and Mrs. Hoff was excused temporarily as a witness.

Mrs. Hoff's statement brought a quick denial from Alfred Budreau, of Yonkers, N. Y., who said he knew a Mrs. Bertha Hoff and that nine years ago he had a farm at Mountaineale, N. J., 20 miles from the Lindbergh estate.

Budreau said he did not know Fisch and had never visited Mrs. Hoff in Fisch's company.

Condon Defended.
"Jasfies" reputation and character were defended from eccentricity by the baldish, heavy-set Seykora, department of justice inspector, after the defense had aimed at him the questions "Did you ever hear of any examination of Dr. Condon by alienists?"

Didn't you investigate thoroughly a man who popped out, took $50,000, and passed it over a wall or a bush to a mysterious man when nobody saw him? Did your investigation disclose that Dr. Condon was an eccentric and was known to have masqueraded about the Bronx in women's clothing? Did it disclose that he was transferred for a reason at a school downtown?"

Seykora met the questions with answers defensive of Dr. Condon.

Cross-examined Wilentz asked Seykora if his investigations had not shown Dr. Condon was a patriotic citizen, keenly interested in civic and welfare matters in the Bronx.

Reilly objected to the "eulogy of this witness Condon" but Seykora was permitted to answer.

No Bar To Investigation.
At one point Reilly asked Seykora "did any one in Washington from the president down ever stay your hand in the investigation of Dr. Condon?"

"Not in the slightest," Seykora answered.

The federal agent also testified the investigation disclosed Dr. Condon did not have relatives buried in St. Raymond's cemetery although there were several headstones with the Condon name on it.

Reilly also pressed Seykora to say whether he knew that not an agent of the department of justice had been permitted to see the ransom note on March 2, 1932.

Wilentz objected and the court sustained him. Wilentz said that was not a fact.

More friends of the Hauptmann family went to the stand in an attempt to strengthen stories he could not have been the man who passed a ransom note at the Greenwich Village theater, almost 15 miles from his home, the night of November 26, 1933, Hauptmann's birthday.

Birthday Party.
They said they attended a birthday party at the Hauptmann home at which Isador Fisch also was present, and that Hauptmann did not leave his home before 10 p. m.

Wilentz objected, offering to produce "this truck load" of records if the defense desired.

Fischer said the reports asked could be brought to court in a brief case.

Fischer renewed his request for press bulletins "over Colonel Schwarzkopf's signature" which dealt with the investigation about the time of the suicide of Violet Sharpe.

Lanigan insisted that the subpoena did not cover production of such reports.

Justice Trenchard told Fischer he did not see the material of the press releases the defense sought.

The material in this, your honor," Fischer went on, "all material headed the police investigation and anything over his signature we take it is official."

"Unless you can show," said the justice, "something is material in these releases for the defense, I feel I must deny your request."

Fischer was allowed to reserve right to cite authorities to support his position and Justice Trenchard directed that the trial proceed.

The defense plan to call Colonel Schwarzkopf as the first witness was altered.

Taxi Driver Called.
Reilly called Philip Moses, Bronx taxi driver. He said he had been a Bronx taxicab for eight years. He said he was in the vicinity of St. Raymond's cemetery, the Bronx, the night of April 2, 1932, in his taxicab.

Moses remembered making two trips and then arriving at the cemetery about 8 p. m.

Reilly introduced in evidence, without objection, aerial view of St. Raymond's cemetery.

Moses identified Whittemore avenue but said the road he was on, was not shown on the photograph.

Reilly then used a state exhibit, in Germany where he died of tuberculosis last year.

The witnesses testified Hauptmann was "respectable" and kind to his family.

The state obtained the exclusion of the comment about respectability over defense objections. It sought to combat insinuations about Hauptmann's actions when his wife was visiting in Germany.

Calmly, Mrs. Louise Wollenberg said she had seen Fisch with Hauptmann at a broker's office and then later at the farewell party. She and her husband, Otto, a barber, remained at the Hauptmann home all night, she said.

Meeting With Fisch.
The barber also told of having met Fisch at the Hauptmann home and attending the farewell party.

Thin-faced little Victor Schussler, a tenant in the same house occupied by the Hauptmanns, also attended the farewell party. He said he possessed several carpenter tools after Hauptmann's arrest, but testified that neither the chisel nor the plane which are the state exhibits were his.

"I was wondering why Hauptmann did not see the materiality," he said, "on cross-examination, repeating an answer he previously had given Bronx police."

Matilda Heyne, of Elizabeth, a close friend of the Hauptmanns, and her husband, Otto, also testified to attending the Fisch farewell party, but neither saw Fisch arrive, they said.

From Mrs. Maria Mueller, a niece of Mrs. Hauptmann and God-mother of the Hauptmann child, Manfred, the next witness brought out the large map of the Bronx and photographs of St. Raymond's cemetery.

Moses was unable to identify certain paths in the cemetery, observing "it's been built up since."

Moses was excused after he said receipts for his expenses in Flemington were not kept for reimbursement by the state.

Mrs. Hauptmann's Niece Sworn.
Mrs. Maria Mueller, niece of Mrs. Hauptmann, was the next witness sworn.

She said she remembered being at Mrs. Hauptmann's house on the 26th of November, 1933.

The date has two significances in the trial; it was Hauptmann's birthday, and also the day he allegedly passed a ransom bill in a Greenwich Village theater.

On the afternoon of November 26, 1933, she testified, she went to the defendant's home. She found Mrs. Hauptmann alone. Hauptmann arrived at 4 p. m. and later Isador Fisch and Paul Vetterle came in, she said.

From the time Hauptmann came in until he went out at 10 p. m. to take his home he left the house?

No.

Mrs. Mueller, in broken English, described a dress, with a medalion ornament, brought to her at the Hauptmann home from Germany by Vetterle. Her mother sent it, she said.

Reilly directed the witness next to the bon voyage party December 2, 1933, at the Hauptmann home for Isador Fisch, who was sailing for Europe in a few days.

Q. Do you remember the party?
A. Yes, I do.

Q. Were you at that party?
A. Yes.

Q. Were you there before Isador Fisch arrived?
A. No, I was in the bedroom.

Stayed Until End of Party.
Q. When did Fisch leave?
A. When the party broke up. About 2 or 3 o'clock.

Reilly brought out that Hauptmann was good to his family.

Reilly ended his examination and Wilentz taxed the witness on her memory of the time the party broke up.

She testified that the visitors left between 9:30 and 10 p. m. and not earlier.

Wilentz sought to elicit from the witness that information that she might have left the Hauptmann house earlier on the birthday night.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you came home at 8 o'clock and got supper for your husband?
A. Oh, no.

Q. Do you remember telling the Bronx police that nobody drove you home that night?
A. Oh, that's a lie.

The witness said Hauptmann had taken her home alone.

Reilly on redirect brought out the great distance between her home and the Greenwich Village theater where the ransom bill was passed.

Mrs. Mueller said that she had taken the taxi to the theater, she said.

Q. Did you suggest the name for the Hauptmann baby?
A. Yes, because my cousin's baby on the other side was named Manfred.

Theater Patron Called.
Joseph J. Tattell, a New Yorker who identified himself as a patron of Loew's theater in Sheridan avenue, was the next witness called.

It became immediately apparent the defense planned to use him to attack the testimony of Mrs. Cecile Barr, the theater ticket taker who said Hauptmann passed a ransom bill at her window.

He said he knew Mrs. Cecile Barr, the theater ticket seller.

Q. What personal experience have you had with Mrs. Barr with reference to making change during the past two years?
A. Wilentz objected to the question as immaterial.

Pope rephrased it to inquire "Just how good was Mrs. Barr's recollection of faces and remembrance of people?"

Wilentz objected again, and Pope continued his effort to assail the road mentioned by the witness and the effort to locate it was abandoned.

Q. Were you on this road that cut through the cemetery, April 2d?
A. At first three fellows hailed me. The three men came up to him, he said, "I called them No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3."

Moses was not permitted to tell what "No. 2" said to him.

"They went into huddle," Moses testified, "and then got in my car. They picked up a fourth man and had another huddle."

Driven to Parked Car.
The party drove to a "gray car" which was stalled, the little man continued. He said he aided them in starting it and they drove off.

Reilly turned Moses over for cross-examination. The taxi driver said he went around Flemington for two weeks.

Wilentz produced one of the many autograph books, circulating in the Bronx, and Moses identified his signature.

Reilly, in a laughing colloquy, with Justice Trenchard, objected to introduction of the book. The justice, "failed to see the materiality," but allowed the page with the signature to be used.

The attorney-general drew from the witness he had been hoaxed into making a "radio broadcast" since he was in Flemington. Moses grinned sheepishly as he admitted his talk was never broadcast.

Q. Was the broadcast about the trial?
A. Now, I imitated Will Rogers.

Q. Did you write a song about the trial?
A. No, I have written a song about the unemployed—a beer song.

Wilentz next brought out the large map of the Bronx and photographs of St. Raymond's cemetery.

Moses was unable to identify certain paths in the cemetery, observing "it's been built up since."

Moses was excused after he said receipts for his expenses in Flemington were not kept for reimbursement by the state.

Byrd Party To Leave Little America Today

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica. (Via Mackay Radio)—Feb. 5.—(AP) The second Byrd antarctic expedition was all set today to quit this icy portion of the world and start back for civilization.

Unless some unforeseen circumstance arises, the whole party should be on its way northward by tomorrow aboard the S. S. Jacob Huppert and the Bear of Oakland.

The shacks on shore are stripped of everything valuable, and men, airplanes, dogs, and scientific equipment have been loaded on the two ships. The exit through the Bay of Whales is to be made just as soon as ice conditions permit.

tion," the witness protested.

"I'm sorry I'm putting you in an odd position," Justice Trenchard said, "but you must answer this question."

"Bloomington," said Heier. Before he answered he sought to explain that the girl's friends worked there.

The witness' reluctance seemed to vanish. He said the dead girl's first name was "Judy," but he did not know her father's first name, having met him only once.

Q. Is that an accurate and fair picture of the cemetery gates you saw?

A. I don't know whether that's the gates.

Q. But they look like the gates?

A. Yes. They may be the gates and they may not be the gates. Gates are gates.

Justice Trenchard interrupted the repetitious questioning.

"Are you able to state," he asked, "whether these are or are not the gates you saw?"

"No, sir," Heier replied.

Quizzed on Route Followed.

Wilentz then turned to quizzing the witness on the route he followed on the trip he made from Brooklyn to the Bronx home of the girl.

Q. What time did you meet the lady?

A. About 8:15.

Q. On the sidewalk?

A. By the house.

Q. How was she dressed? What color was her coat?

A. I think it was green.

Heier said he and the girl drove about for a time and parked at the cemetery about 9 o'clock.

Q. You're not certain who you saw there that night, are you?

A. No.

Q. Whoever you saw you saw when you flashed on the lights for a few seconds?

A. Yes, I left almost as soon as I saw the man about 11 o'clock.

The spot where Heier said he and his girl friend were parked was only a few hundred feet away, prosecution attorneys said, from the spot where Colonel Lindbergh waited in Al Reich's car for "Jafie" to return from the ransom payment rendezvous.

Wilentz had the witness repeat the exact location of his parked car and said that he never saw any other car near by.

Q. You went to Mr. Reilly's office and someone took your statement?

A. They didn't take my statement.

Q. You just told what you had seen and were told to go to Flemington?

Heier testified his car fare to Flemington had been paid by Reilly's assistants.

Court then took its mid-afternoon recess.

During the recess a member of the prosecution staff identified a photograph of gates of Woodlawn cemetery as that of St. Raymond's.

Heier returned to the witness stand, and Wilentz asked him:

Q. While you were at that cemetery did you hear anyone yell "Hey, Dok-tor?"

A. I did not.

Q. Hear anybody holler "Dok-tor?"

A. No, sir.

Wilentz asked how many persons he saw from the parked car.

The witness said he saw one person leap from the cemetery wall.

Q. You saw only one person, then?

A. I saw several persons around there.

Q. But only one jumping off the wall?

A. That's right.

Terminates Questioning.

Wilentz terminated the cross-examination.

Reilly asked if it was the finding of the old letter from "Judy" which recalled the incident. Heier said it was.

Q. From that letter you recalled the incident in the cemetery?

A. Yes.

Q. And you felt you should come here and testify?

A. Yes.

Reilly offered the letter for identification and released the witness.

"Have you any envelope in the handwriting of the lady," Wilentz asked.

"No," Heier replied, and was excused.

The defense then called as a witness George Steinweg, a stout, middle-aged man who conducted a steamship and tourist ticket agency in New York city.

Q. Did you prior to December 6, 1933, sell transportation to Germany to Isidor Fisch?

A. Yes. On August 18, 1933, was the first visit of Mr. Fisch. He made his reservation then for the Manhattan sailing December 6.

Q. When did he come in and pay for his ticket?

A. November 14, 1933.

Paid for Self and Uhlig.

Steinweg said Fisch paid for passage for himself and Henry Uhlig.

Q. When did he come in and buy his ticket?

A. He made the final payment November 14.

Q. How much did he spend for his passage?

A. $410.

Q. How much money did he exchange for German marks?

A. In registered German marks he obtained 800 marks for himself and 300 marks for Uhlig.

Q. What was the value of that exchange in American money?

A. About $650.

Q. Did he exhibit any money to you after he bought the tickets?

A. He had quite some money in his wallet.

Reilly released the witness to Wilentz for cross-examination.

Q. Didn't you know that Hauptmann gave Fisch $2,000 for that purpose (trip expenses)?

A. No.

Q. Then you don't know where the money came from?

A. No.

Steinweg was excused.

Reilly called in rapid succession the names of Gustave Mueller, Carl Schwarz, Mrs. Carl Schwarz, Augustus Lukatis and Mr. Brickman. No one answered his loud summons.

Progress of National Brands Food Stores Told to 350 Merchants at Meeting Here

More than 350 persons gathered Tuesday night to hear the announcement of progress of the National Brands Food Stores made by the organization's president, I. J. Paradies. In a few short months 50 independent grocers of established reputation have joined the National Brands to take advantage of its purchasing, marketing and advertising idea. John Barrus, of the Curtis Publishing Company, was principal speaker at the dinner held at Sterchi's tea room. Staff photo.

Nationally advertised brands of foods are found on the pantry shelf of every housewife in the country. John Barrus, of the Curtis Publishing Company, told more than 350 representatives of National Brands Food Stores at their first get-together meeting Tuesday night at Sterchi's tea room.

"From 75 to 95 per cent of the staple goods purchased by housekeepers in the United States are brands which are known nationally through advertising," Barrus declared. He is connected with the service department of the Curtis Publishing Company, publisher of the Saturday Evening Post, the Ladies Home Journal, the Country Gentleman and other periodicals.

Charles Muse, executive of the National Brands Food Stores, was toastmaster and introduced the principal speakers, including I. J. Paradies and M. Rich, of Paradies & Rich, Atlanta's sponsoring jobber; William M. Hicks, manager of Sterchi's; J. Y. Talmadge, of Athens, and L. S.

UNION SPEAKER RAPS AUTO CODE EXTENSION

600 Workers Hear F. J. Dillon Say 'Economic Strength' Must Be Exercised.

Asserting that employers in the automobile industry apparently failed to recognize certain rights of the employees, Francis J. Dillon, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, Tuesday night told more than 600 automobile workers at the Labor Temple that the only course open for them "is the exercise of their economic strength."

Dillon was introduced at the meeting of the Atlanta sections of the United Automobile Workers' Union by George Googe, of Atlanta, special representative of the American Federation of Labor, with which the union is affiliated.

Appearing before the meeting of automobile workers "to advise with them as to their future program and policies," the labor leader said, "I cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that there will be no unauthorized strikes but that the resources of the American Federation of Labor will be utilized to advise these people along proper lines and to protect them and conserve their rights, if it is necessary for them to withdraw their services from this corporation."

"Since January 29, when we were called to Washington to submit statements setting forth the plight of automobile workers before representatives of the national recovery board," Dillon went on, "historic events affecting the welfare of approximately 400,000 working people in one of the nation's greatest industries have occurred."

"Seemingly out of a maze of uncertainty, these people who for 10 months had faith in their government and the president of the United States were astonished when they were advised on the 30th of January about a pronouncement coming from the White House in which the president stated that the automobile code was to be extended during the lifetime of the present recovery act and that the discredited automobile labor board was to be given a new lease on life for a like period of time."

Adding that it "is difficult to estimate the effect this will have on the lives and attitudes of these thousands of workers," Dillon said it had been "the hope of representatives of the American Federation of Labor that employers in the automobile industry were abreast of the times and appreciated the great change that had come in our industrial life and that they would recognize the fact that workers engaged in great mass production industries such as this were entitled to certain rights which long ago were recognized by congress but it seems to me that this is not the case and I am apprehensive of the future for there remains but one course for these people to follow, that is the exercise of their economic strength."

ISRAEL ABELSON, 82, PASSES AT HOME HERE

Israel Abelson, well-known retired Atlanta merchant, died Tuesday night at a private hospital at the age of 82. He resided at 25 Richardson street, S. E.

He was the father of Abe, Harry, Jake and Max Abelson, of Atlanta, and Morris and Sam Abelson, of Chattanooga. Mrs. Sam Egan, of Atlanta, and Mrs. N. A. Levine and Mrs. A. N. Levy, also of Chattanooga.

Jake, a former widely known boxer, and Max Abelson, ar-well-known Atlanta hotel operators.

Funeral services are to be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of Sam Greenberg and Rabbi Harry Epstein will officiate. Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery.

HOSPITALIZATION PLAN IS FAVORED BY RIVERS

Amendment of Georgia insurance laws to permit the establishment of a plan of voluntary group insurance, was favored Tuesday night by Speaker El Rivers, of the Georgia house of representatives, and other representatives at a meeting of the legislative members, physicians and hospital representatives at Crawford W. Long hospital.

The plan, under which groups of workers would be permitted to form voluntary programs by which they could pay a certain amount each into a fund that their expenses might be taken care of when they required hospitalization, was outlined by Dr. C. Rufus Rorem, of Chicago. He stated the plan has been successfully adopted by several of the larger cities of the country.

Under this plan, large groups would be able to obtain an outline of approximately $9 per member to assure themselves of complete hospital protection for a maximum of 21 days per year. It was pointed out that those who have been interested in the plan have been balked in their efforts to get a charter because of existing state insurance laws.

In addition to Speaker Rivers, other Georgia dignitaries were present at the meeting, including Carlton Mobley, representing Governor Talmadge; Charles D. Reidsville, president of the senate; Dr. W. Ayres, president of the Georgia Medical Association; Dr. A. H. Runcie, secretary of the Georgia Medical Association, and Dr. Ed. Shanks, president of the Fulton County Medical Association.

Sharecroppers Win Appeal From Fines

WYNNE, Ark., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The Southern Tenant Farmers' Union won its first victory with East Arkansas officers today when four union organizers were given directed verdicts of acquittal in circuit court on their appeals from magistrate court fines.

The four, L. M. Mills and W. H. Stultz, both white, and two negroes, R. T. Butler and A. B. Brooks, were fined $50 each in a magistrate's court last November on charges of obtaining money by false pretenses in the solicitation of initiation fees and dues for membership in the union of sharecroppers.

Before the agreement was reached, the conference defeated 7 to 4 an effort by Senator McCarran, democrat, Nevada, to provide that the prevailing wage be paid workers on public works instead of the $50 a month contemplated under the program.

The Wolman board also apparently was a presidential answer to the federation's claim it was not consulted in negotiations leading to renewal of the auto code.

The White House action was interpreted further as a defense of Donald R. Richberg, emergency council director, who has been bitterly lambasted by organized labor for his part in the code renewal.

Osgurn's letter asking abolition of the board was dated January 28, three days before the code was renewed. The reply went into the mail yesterday.

Green also wrote a letter to the president regarding labor's proposals for the renewed code.

From those two, the president said last Friday, he got an ample understanding of labor's position.

Before he received Roosevelt's letter, Osgurn also asked NRA's administrative board to toss out the Wolman board's election returns so far and to abolish the board as illegal. Osgurn said tonight he would file the same petition with the president. Only about 10 per cent of the votes recorded thus far favored the A. F. of L.

THE TARKER COTTON BILL

The appeal by Representative M. C. Tarkenton, of Georgia, for concerted demand by southern members of congress for amendments to the Bankhead cotton act is aimed at the elimination of discriminations from which the small producer suffered last year.

The Bankhead bill contains many good and effective provisions, but its application last year developed the fact that some of its features worked great harm to the small producers. Governor Talmadge and other southern leaders took issue particularly with the clauses that penalized the small farmer.

Especially was this true in the case of the farmer who, as the result of the appeals in the past for reduced production, had cut his acreage. The Bankhead bill worked a hardship on those farmers who had voluntarily endeavored to improve cotton conditions in the past, while at the same time the act unfairly benefited those farmers who had selfishly refused to cut their production in former years.

President Roosevelt realized that modification of the measure was needed and last year while in Georgia issued an executive order exempting farmers raising two bales or less from the taxing provisions of the Bankhead act.

Representative Tarkenton is to be warmly commended for the earnest effort he is making to bring about such changes in the act as will protect the small farmer from this discrimination. The minimum of two bales should be increased in order to further protect the small farmer from the discrimination imposed by the law as it now stands.

It is fortunate that so able and experienced a member of congress as Representative Tarkenton is leading the fight for what is simple justice to many thousands of southern farmers. He should have the earnest support of every representative from the cotton-producing states.

RAILROADS AID FHA

The railroads of the country have set a fine example of support of the government's recovery activities in the designation of an intermediary to carry the message of the FHA to the hundreds of thousands of rail workers throughout the country.

This representative, named by J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads and formerly president of the Central of Georgia, will receive the assistance of a group composed of representatives of every major railway system in the country.

The representative of the association will have headquarters in the housing administration in Washington and will relay to the men representing the individual railroads the program of home development contemplated under the FHA. They will in turn give the information to the railway employees of the country. To secure additional publicity for the housing program, all employees will be urged to transmit the information they receive to their neighbors and friends.

The FHA has two objectives: the renovation and modernization of homes, and refinancing of mortgages the terms of which make them burdensome to home owners. It is hoped that the modernization program will be instrumental in bringing renewed life to the lagging building trades industry, and that the refinancing program will release huge amounts of cash now idle but for which safe investment is sought.

The regional headquarters of the FHA in Atlanta announce that the railroads of this section are co-operating with the plan of the national association, and the belief is expressed that this co-operation will prove a definite stimulus to the housing movement.

If every industry in the United States and every individual business concern were to give co-operation of this type, not only to the FHA but to the other recovery agencies created by the national government, the emergence from the last stages of the depression would take place practically overnight. The people of the country should give full acknowledgment to the helpful attitude of the railroads in the assistance they are rendering to the FHA.

THE NEW CITY ATTORNEY

In the selection of Jack C. Savage, for several years assistant city attorney and a former member of council, as the successor to the late City Attorney James L. Mayson, the duties of this important municipal post are placed in able and experienced hands.

The new city attorney is not only splendidly versed in the law and a fair fighter but he is intimately familiar with the details of the city government. As a member of council he rendered outstanding service, and as assistant city attorney has indicated unusual determination and ability in the discharge of his duties.

As city attorney, he will be called upon to render decisions and perform other duties of vital importance to every resident of the city. The city attorney must perform his duties fearlessly and without favor. Faced with his new and greater responsibilities, and being a man of force, character and ability, there is every reason to believe that Mr. Savage will measure in every way to the public trust that has been placed in his hands.

The city is fortunate in having a man of Mr. Savage's caliber to fill the place made vacant by the death of Mr. Mayson. There can be no doubt that, under his direction, the office of the city attorney will be conducted on the same high scale of efficiency as it has in the past.

STEEL'S HEAVY WAGE LOAD

Comparative figures on wages paid steel mill employees in the United States and other producing nations reveal the heavy handicap under which American mills are placed in world competition as a result of the wages paid in this country.

The wages paid to steel mill workers in the United States are not high, as viewed from the standpoint of our standards of living, but they are based on hourly rates from 120 to 650 per cent higher than in other steel-producing sections of the world, the products of which are sold in the great markets in direct competition with American steel.

The average wage of the American steel worker is 64.7 cents per hour, while those of Great Britain make only 25.1 cents and of France only 20.6 cents. The average hourly rate in the great steel-producing countries—Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, India, Italy, Japan and Sweden—is approximately 20 cents.

Only the supremacy of American steel, and the introduction of cost-reducing methods and machinery in the mills of this country, make it possible for our manufacturers to hold their own in the markets of the non-producing nations.

What is true of steel is also largely true with other American industries, the products of which are sold throughout the world. The wage element in the manufacture of cotton textiles, the south's major industry, is two or three times as expensive an item in the total production cost in America as elsewhere.

The superior standards of living in America must be upheld, and wage scales must be such that our industrial workers can maintain themselves and their families on the level to which they are entitled, but it must be borne in mind that to make the disparity between wages here and in other countries too great will inevitably mean the loss of world markets and the subsequent collapse of American industry.

Nights on the Plain.

You don't see a soul in the desert and yet the atmosphere is so densely packed with mystery that you feel it to be alive. The shadow of a clump of bushes, or of a rock suddenly assumes a disquieting form, fantastic proportions. We are traveling by night, by moonlight, going south through the Sahara to Lake Chad. We met a military caravan yesterday. Tourages, they were, veiled warriors, armed with long rifles. At their head on white camels, wrapped in pale-blue cloaks, rode two French officers. They seemed to us to be on the edge of the desert in Tchad province," they said, "you will be quite safe. Here on the plain you may have some surprises. The frontier incidents out in Abyssinia have put everybody on his mettle."

But the Tchad province is far. Twenty days fast driving!

A Bouda and Things . . .

"Look Youssef, what is that?" I say to my driver at one point in the still night. Something was moving on top of a sand-dune. It might have been a man and it might have been a beast. Now it stood up straight and then again went on all fours. The shadow jumped. I wondered if my nerves were going bad.

"It's a bouda," said Youssef, and I noticed at the time that he shuddered himself.

"What is a bouda?"

"A man who changes himself into a hyena by night and who eats corpses. At daybreak he changes back to human form. The desert is full of them. They are powerful spirits. Bullets don't hurt them." . . .

The moon slides out and in among fast-shifting clouds like a yellow panther. There are queer shapes in the heavens. The searchlight-beam of the first car of the expedition suddenly bounces up against a blue wall, which rises up to the sky. On top of that monstrous dragon and gargoyle seem to be crawling, kneeing, charioting, its ghostly nude branches spread out against the horizon, looks like a ghost throwing out signals of alarm. The play of shadows in the desert is dramatic, blood-curdling spectacle. We had a hailstorm this evening. It is bitter cold. My teeth chatter and the car slithers and slips over the icy surface. We skirt the blue wall now turned icy black. It turns out to be a gigantic rock which rises perpendicularly out of the sand-dunes.

Ghost Caravans.

Then, far away to the east, we catch sight of another caravan moving against the moon. A procession of silent ghosts. Because we are below in a valley, the camels' legs over in the distance assume disproportionate length and form against the lunar horizon. Suddenly, rhythmically, without a sound, the chain of beasts and the small black dromedary forms on the backs traverse the silver-screen of quivering darkness. It is a living in colors of clear-obsidian, you would say, but a cinematographic vision so mysterious, so primordial that you unconsciously hold your breath.

The Prayer at Dawn.

Youssef quotes from the Koran that moment and his voice restores the reality. He says: "O, thou, arisen, wrapped in thy mantle. Arise, magnify Him. . . . By the moon, by the night when it is re-created. . . . By the shadows of the night, when they lengthen, turn to Allah. For He is compassionate, merciful, for ever enduring. His goodness. . . . You have either a fine dramatic sense, Youssef," I tell him, "or else you are afraid!"

"Both," he replies cryptically. But it is dawn and he flings himself out of the car and with his face to the east he intones the terrible words: "Allahum! Allahum! There is no God but God, and Mohammed is the prophet of God."

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon.

NO SALE WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Only one thing is wrong with President Roosevelt's firm of Yankee Traders, Inc. It cannot get any customers. This is frequently discouraging to businessmen, and it is beginning to discourage the New Dealers.

You can mark the progress of one big angle of the business by lifting the cover on the scene at the fifth consecutive collapse of the Russian negotiations recently.

The traders were grouped in the office of Mr. Hull, secretary of state. He and his three aides (Messrs. Moore, Bullitt and Kelley) affected the supreme court countenance customary to Yankee Traders. In came M. Troyanovsky, the Russian ambassador, supposed to be bearing a compromise offer.

After greeting M. Troyanovsky, Trader Hull waited for him to speak. The Russian dicker said his government had instructed him to reject the American credit proposal and added that Moscow felt its demand for a long-term loan and credit was reasonable. Mr. Hull was so exasperated he got up and said, in effect: "If that is the way you feel about it, the trade is off."

M. Troyanovsky was surprised. He expected some discussions. Nobody said anything. The Yankee Traders arose. There was nothing left for the Russian Trader to do but leave, and he did.

Mr. Hull had to ring up "no sale" again on the empty cash register.

AUDACITY

The underlying difficulty in the Russian case is the same as in all. The Russians will not trade unless they get the best of it. Specifically they spun a long-term credit and demand a $100,000,000 cash loan. In other words, they not only refuse credit but want to borrow from the store. Storekeeper Hull will give them five-year credits and no more.

The result is that a subtle diplomatic shooting contest has started between the United States and the reds. Our diplomats are planting stories in our press that they will dissolve the export-import bank for Russia. Also that they will start an economic blacklist of nations with whom they do not do business.

In response the Russians have planted a yarn in Moscow that Mr. Roosevelt promised M. Litvinoff a cash loan and that the president now is going back on his word.

It is all very merry, but there still is no cash in the till and no early likelihood of any.

GUMSHOEING

The split inside the senate appropriations committee on the president's relief bill was worse than advertised. Democratic members did their best to cover it up. First they invited the republicans to leave the room, so they would be among friends. Then little groups got together to dicker. The unreconstructed rebel, Senator Glass, had no part in it. He walked off and let the rest fight.

Glass has about all the rebellion he can handle in fighting the New Deal money and banking policies, and apparently does not want to take on the relief fight also.

Other members slipped around corners, dodged reporters, denied they were meeting, and generally acted as if Sherlock Holmes was after them.

PEACE?

The reason is that the New Deal's ace compromiser, Senator Byrnes, was trying to work things out to avoid a public fight on the floor. The World Court licking is still fresh in the minds of all. The two with whom he was having the most trouble were McCarran, of Nevada, and Russell, of Georgia, although Adams, of Colorado, was obstreperous enough to want to know why twice as much money should be tossed into unnecessary public works to care for half as many unemployed.

Byrnes ran around from rebel to rebel and then to a telephone to talk with the White House. He will fix it.

OFFER

Huey Long recently wrote a friend about his presidential aspirations as follows:

"You flatter me. Believe me when I say that I have no further political aspirations. I would be a happy man if I could secure the passage of my bill for the redistribution of wealth. . . . For I would that night retire from the senate and all political life. . . . That is a sound offer for any presidential candidate, as no one will take him up on it."

NOTES

AAA Administrator Chester Davis does not believe the reports he sees in the papers about him leaving the New Deal July 1. He says he has no such intention and has received no such suggestion.

Huey Long uses United States senate judiciary committee stationery, on which he adds: "Louisiana Office, 822 Perdido Street, New Orleans." In other words, the Huey Long branch of the senate judiciary committee at that address.

One bill which no one need worry about any more is that of Senator Norris to abolish politics in the postoffice department. Few congressmen will dare oppose it openly, but they will kill it with silence.

The New Deal is whooping up pressure on congress for the relief bill by saying February 10 is the deadline when Mr. Hopkins' FERA money will run out. There are several ways he can get more money temporarily if he wants to.

Supreme court experts say there is nothing to prevent the court from handing down the gold decision unexpectedly after the market closes next day, although it never has been done before. The latest untrustworthy gossip is that the decision will be 6 to 3 or 7 to 2 in favor of the government, with Justice Hughes writing the majority opinion and Vandevanter the minority.

The reddest face in Washington is that of the republican senator who strolled into the White House reception recently with his hands absently behind him in the tails of his frock coat. He was drawn out of line by suspicious guards and frisked.

The "Smart Dogs" Are the Ones That Had to Work for a Living

By Robert Quillen

There are people who regard labor-saving machinery as an unmitigated blessing that will in time redeem man from the original curse.

Their mistake is in the assumption that if a little is good, more is better. That is true of some things, but not of machinery and strychnine.

Because tools and machines have enabled man to lighten his burdens and increase his leisure, thus making his life richer and easier, it doesn't follow that he will attain the ultimate of bliss when machines do all the work and he can loaf all the time.

Because the getting of food has been the greatest of man's problems through the ages, it does not follow that the man most fortunate now is the one whose abundance enables him to eat most.

Man's intellectual ability is closely related to the ability to use his hands. Mind and hand worked together in designing the first stone hammer, and in the age-long record of increasing manual skill we find the story of man's intellectual development.

Since the cunning of the hands is directed by the mind, failure to develop and utilize it leaves one capacity of the mind unused and undeveloped. The person whose fingers are "all thumbs" usually is impractical and without self-reliance.

Civilization was built by races that learned manual skill from hard necessity. In the tropics, where comfort and security required few things made by hand, men are primitive still.

Japan has made faster progress than any other nation in history, and the Japanese have cunning fingers and practical minds. Russia has lagged behind, and her slow-witted, visionary peasants have yet to develop mechanical skill.

When any race becomes too rich and proud to work with its hands, it loses some vital virtue and its birthright is given to its servants.

Which man is more independent, self-reliant and resourceful: the plowman who can build a wagon, a plow and a house, or the modern who can call an expert to change a tire on his typewriter?

It will be a sad day for America when no labor is required except the pushing of a button. Endless leisure never yet has developed a superior man; what reason have we to believe that nature's scheme will change?

FAIR ENOUGH HERE'S EARNED TO AGREE ON PACT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Foul Treachery. NEW YORK, Feb. 5. The last time your correspondent visited the department of the interior in Washington, Mr. Siew Godwin, the public relations counsel to Secretary Harold L. Ickes, was still teething but was bravely holding down his chair until quitting time.

"Ook ook," Mr. Godwin said, inserting the forefinger of his two hands in the left corner of his mouth and peeling his countenance back as you might attempt to turn a football cover inside out.

"Ook ere," Mr. Godwin said, his speech somewhat embarrassed by this inconvenience. "Do fee at?"

Your correspondent bent close, peering into Mr. Godwin's interior as far back as that which Mr. Al Smith, in his presidential campaign orations used to call the larnix. On the lower left jaw there reposed a considerable block of poured concrete suggesting some work by the PWA.

"That is marvelous," your correspondent exclaimed. "Did it hurt?"

Mr. Godwin released his face, permitting his handsome features to snap back into shape and rubbed a moment. "Turt like hell," he said presently, "but nothing compared to the head-ache when I got back to the office."

Unkind Act.

It was during Mr. Godwin's absence at the department of the interior released to the newspapers as an official handout, a reprint of an article published in the Nation which named many unkind cracks at two members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet and one of his best senators. The Nation is a little magazine very much in love with humanity which expresses that affection by uttering unkind cracks about many leading statesmen. This article severely criticized Mr. Farley, Mr. Cummings and Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi.

Without going into the truth or falsity of the criticism, it was felt that Mr. Ickes, as a member of the cabinet himself, should not have given circulation to an article of this type. After all, even though Mr. Ickes is the house dick of the administration and, such, frequently has to chase Mr. Farley away, he should always do this in a quiet manner. The greater the truth of the article, the worse the scandal in the happy household of the administration.

The Messrs. Farley, Cummings and Harrison had sent a deserving democrat named T. Webster Wilson down to the Virgin Islands to act as federal judge. That was something that couldn't very well be helped. Mr. Wilson is a Mississippi statesman who found himself unconnected with a public pay roll for the first time since 1915. It was a wise move, as it was a judge in the Virgin Islands and thus put him back on the pay roll and, thus, also, rid his mind of any notion of running for the senate in opposition to Senator Harrison.

In addition, the United States asked, through Counselor Ray Atherton, of the United States embassy, to repeal the military clauses of the separate German-American peace treaty, provided the Anglo-French proposals bear fruit. Those clauses duplicate the military provisions of the Versailles treaty.

Favorable Replies Seen.

While the foreign office emphasized that official replies as yet had been received from Germany, Belgium, or Italy, official quarters expressed confidence all would be favorable.

In line with its offer to issue further verbal explanations of the Anglo-French agreement which was flatly stated, contained no secret clauses, the foreign office today talked the matter over with representatives of several interested embassies and tonight foreign diplomats clearly understood that Britain will join the proposed western European alliance whether or not Germany does.

A prominent diplomat, discussing the talk he had with the foreign office, told the Associated Press "there is not the slightest doubt that this is the situation."

After the speeches of Premier Pierre-Etienne Flamin in the French chamber of deputies last night, and the announcement that the British and French were in agreement as to this arrangement, British official circles said Britain would agree to the Franco-British "some different arrangement" must be made should Germany turn down the offer.

SPLIT IN CABINET ON SECURITY BARED

proved it, deciding to let congress make the choice.

As a result, the congressional committees tonight had only two unanimously-indorsed suggestions before them.

1.—That the function of issuing and selling voluntary annuity certificates be transferred from the new social insurance board to the treasury so as to eliminate the onus of charity; and

2.—That proposed taxes for the compulsory old-age pensions be stepped up from 10 to 15 per cent, the workers going too far into the red on "unearned" annuities.

Praised by Leaders.

No suggested changes were offered for other sections of the bill, but there were two suggestions by democratic members of the ways and means committee.

Chairman Doughton, democrat, North Carolina, termed the secretary's statement as "fine." Representative Cooper, democrat, Tennessee, used similar language, and Representative Vinson, democrat, Kentucky, said "I am for them." Republicans reserved comment.

As it now stands, the bill provides two forms of old-age pensions, one is the compulsory, for employees making less than $3,000 a year, and the other is voluntary, for those making over that amount and getting back whatever they choose to pay in.

But the compulsory provision, both employee and employer are taxed a percentage of their pay roll and earnings. The money to be kept in the treasury and paid back to the worker when he reaches 65. The federal government could not advance more than $15 a month for these pensions.

Donate Balance.

Workers who now are close to 65 would not, when they reach that age, have contributed enough to pay their pensions. The government will donate the balance—or the "unearned" annuity.

Estimating that at present the federal government's cost to meet "unearned annuities" would be $1,500,000,000 a year by 1980, Morgenthau proposed that the compulsory tax start at 2 per cent, instead of 1 as the bill now provides, and increase to 6 per cent in the thirteenth year, instead of 5 per cent in the twenty-first year.

"We desire to establish this system on such sound foundations that it can be continued indefinitely in the future," he explained.

He urged the elimination of the farmers, domestic and casuals because "in view of the great importance of our objective, we should greatly regret the imposition of administrative burdens in the bill that would threaten the continued operation of the entire system."

National League Quadrantees Lease of Braves' Field Until '46

My mind happens to be on horses today. This was caused, no doubt, by a white saddle horse which your correspondent rode for a while in the Georgia-Florida field trials at the Norias plantation in Florida last Monday.

You see, this chunky white horse never learned to walk, poor thing. Never. All he could do was go in a jog trot. A jog trot is up and down and forward. Mostly up and down.

The old body bounds into the air and crashes down on the saddle. This is repeated with every step of the horse and after a while this banging becomes very monotonous. Here was a very stylish gallery and your correspondent in the midst of it, popping up above the crowd and descending again to meet that saddle. Most embarrassing!

C. V. Whitney's dog was running out in front, which reminded me that C. V. Whitney was second place money winner for 1934 with his horses, winning $173,550, which was not enough, I am sure, to pay the operating expenses of his stable. He got no more than an even break, if that.

And C. V. Whitney has no horse which is a stand-out for the 61st running of the Kentucky Derby on May 4, of this spring. C. V. Whitney's pointer won Monday but I do not look for a Whitney horse in the Derby except, of course, from the Greentree stable, which is Mrs. Pavne Whitney's stable. She offers Sailors Beware and Plat Eye, both good two-year-olds.

It was Mrs. Dodge Sloan who won the first money for 1934. Her Brookmeade stables, beginning with the Cavalcade winning victory in the 1934 Kentucky Derby, went on to win $251,138 in the year and show a small profit on the stable for the year. But a very small one. The running horse game is an expensive playing.

And it is Mrs. Dodge Sloan who has the winter favorite for the Derby in Old Kaintuck. Her Psychic Bid, a chestnut colt by Chance Play-Imp, Queen Herod. The colt started 12 times in 1934 and won four, placed second three times and third once. He won $37,380 and paid for his oats.

Mrs. Dodge Sloan may find the Whitneys back at the top again with Plat Eye, the best colt of 1934 from the Greentree stable.

The thoughts kept banging around in the old skull as it went bobbing up and down on the hurricane deck of that chunky white horse.

It isn't long until the Derby in Kentucky.

WHAT A MONTH! WHAT A MONTH!

Monday was the birthday of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. And yesterday saw Mr. Joel Chandler (Jake) Harris Jr. celebrating another milestone, so to speak, on the sprint down life's pathway.

Mr. Harris possesses what seems to be eternal youth. The writer felt old, very old. It was that white horse again. Aged on the leather. Not since father used to apply the razor strop has leather seemed so distasteful. Today happens to be the birthday of the state of Massachusetts. The next day is the birthday of Babe Ruth and Charles Dickens.

And so on. Mr. Harris and I comfort ourselves that February furnishes 25 per cent of all those occupying niches in the Hall of Fame. They may start carving niches for Mr. Harris and your reporter.

What a month! Birthstone is an amethyst, indicating sincerity. A few important dates for February are:

Feb. 3—Birthday of Horace Greeley, who said, "Go West, young man. I tried, unsuccessfully, while in Hollywood in December to make an engagement with Miss West but Mr. Harris knows more Mae West jokes than any other man so we have not failed to heed Mr. Greeley's advice."

Feb. 4—Charles A. Lindbergh's birthday.

Feb. 5—Birthday of Mr. Jake Harris and Ralph McGill.

Feb. 6—Massachusetts, the sixth state, admitted to Union.

Feb. 7—Babe Ruth born, 1894. Charles Dickens born, 1812. And Mr. Dickens never wrote a romance which could match the life story of The Babe.

Feb. 8—Boy Scout anniversary.

Feb. 9—Harrison, ninth president, born 1773.

Feb. 10—Morgan Blake born, 1886.

Feb. 11—Birthday of the late Daniel Boone and Thomas A. Edison.

Feb. 12—Birthday of Abraham Lincoln.

Feb. 14—Telephone invented and Arizona admitted to Union.

Feb. 16—Senate passes prohibition repeal measure.

Feb. 18—Edison patented phonograph. (What? And born only seven days before?)

Feb. 19—Ohio admitted to Union.

Feb. 22—Birthday George Washington and James Russell Lowell.

Feb. 25—First federal bank chartered.

Feb. 27—Lonsfellow born, 1807.

Enrico Caruso and Marconi are also among those born in February.

What a month! I ask you, now. What a month!

THOSE TOURING PROS.

Mr. Robert Harlow, who is an excellent fellow and who does a fine job of rallying the professional golfers during their winter tours, is in the habit of referring to the winter tours as "The Golfing College."

He writes that the Masters' tournament at Augusta in April, in which Bobby Jones will play, will find a group of golfers which controls the competitive game and which has left the amateurs far behind.

Well, maybe so. The boys do burn up the winter greens. But I find all the winter stars strangely far behind when the national open is played and the pressure goes on. Still, at that, they put on a brilliant show.

And I will be very much surprised if the Masters' tournament does not find a fellow named Bobby Jones up there near the front. He won't have to run the whole show this year. And the mob won't trample after him, breathing on his neck as they did last spring. I'm looking forward to that Masters' tournament.

EDDIE MOORE'S NEW YORK VISIT.

There seems to be no fear, at baseball headquarters, that Eddie Moore, the Cracker manager, is lost. In fact, some news is expected today, indicating that some baseball deals have been made or are in the making.

The present set-up at Ponce de Leon has people talking baseball again. The Crackers will win the attendance trophy once more, beating the New Orleans Kop the Kupa Kampaign—because they selected that name, if for no other reason.

I am over my peeve. I do not want to move our club into the American association for another year or so. This year we will remain in the league and win the pennant.

Mr. Joe Engel is credited with making the statement, "Is Atlanta still in the league?"

I am disappointed in Cousin Joe. Once upon a time he was an original cuss. If he has descended to aping Bill Terry, then Mr. Engel is no doubt ill and in need of company. We must go over and cheer him up.

CADETS UPSET SMITHIES, 20-18, BOYS' HIGH WINS

Great Defensive Play of G. M. A. Accounts for Startling Upset.

By Roy White.

G. M. A. sprang the biggest upset of the prep basketball season with 20-18 victory over Tech High Tuesday afternoon on the College Park court. Tech High's loss and Boys' High 34-27 win over Commercial on the J. P. C. court, gave the Purple leadership of the Big Four championship race.

Tech High ran into a group of tall, hustling guards, Tuesday and trailed throughout the game. It was the third defeat of the year for the Smithies, who had previously been beaten by Tech freshmen and by Columbus High.

G. M. A. has lost five of its most important games, but the upset of Tech High gave the Cadets new confidence and they will be hard to get along with in the remaining games.

G. M. A. got the jump on Tech High and led all the way. The Cadets were ahead, 8 to 6, at the first quarter, 16 to 9, at the half, and 20 to 13, at the third quarter. The Smithies made only two field goals in the first half.

After piling up a seven-point lead in the third quarter, the Cadets played a defensive game through the fourth quarter and failed to score, but were good enough to keep the Smithies trailing.

G. M. A. has one of its most unusual teams. There was not a promising looking forward in the squad and Rowlett and Grahl, two fast guards, have been playing the forward positions. The Cadets have not been high scorers and their opponents likewise have set no scoring records.

The team played a cautious game Tuesday, scoring as it could and defeating its major attention to keeping Tech High from scoring. It was not until the second half of the game that the Cadets realized that victory was within their grasp and they went to work and protected a small margin of points.

The entire G. M. A. team played great basketball. Backenstoe scored 18 points, with Rowlett, one point less. Every player scored at least two points.

Pete Tinsley played the best game for Tech High and scored half of the 18 points. It was Tinsley's fine play in the last quarter which pulled Tech High up within two points of a tie score.

Purples Rally To Beat Typists.

A spectacular rally in the closing minutes enabled Boys' High to beat Commercial. The Purples scored 14 points in the last five minutes, while the Typists scored only 2 points during the same period.

Commercial battled Boys' High on even terms until the last five minutes. Boys' High was leading, 6 to 4, at the end of the first quarter. They were all square at 13-13 at the half.

The play of "Kootie" Stein, Commercial guard, was outstanding. He was the main spring of the Commercial attack and at the same time held "Tappy" Purples, Commercial forward, to 10 points. Stein and Ginsburg are members of the same team in the Jewish Alliance league, but their play Tuesday was far from their cooperation displayed in league competition. It was an interesting battle to witness.

Jim Bagby Jr. led the scoring with 12 points and was high scorer in the game. He was in the last few minutes which gave the Purples the victory.

Purples, Smithies To Meet Thursday.

Tech High and Boys' High will play at 8 o'clock Thursday night on the Henry Gray court. It was announced Tuesday that the game was originally scheduled for Friday afternoon, but was moved up to Thursday instead.

The Smithies are leading the Big Four league with 18 wins and 10 losses. Boys' High has shown a decided improvement in its recent games. The Purples were slow to get started against Commercial Tuesday but finished strong.

Tech High lost only Red Pittman from its 1934 team which was runner-up to Lanier High for state honors.

Druid Hills Meets Fulton High at J. P. C.

Fulton High, tied with Commercial for leadership of the North Georgia Interscholastic conference basketball league, will play Druid Hills at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon on the J. P. C. court.

Druid Hills is battling with Marietta and Russell for second place in the standings, and a victory today will give Druid Hills one of the favored positions in the tournament selections next week.

Fulton plays Russell Friday night on the East Point court.

G. I. A. A. Scheduled At City Auditorium.

The annual Georgia Interscholastic Athletic Association basketball tournament will be played at the city auditorium.

The association Sunday voted to hold the tournament in Atlanta at a meeting at Augusta.

Boys' High, Tech High, G. M. A. and Commercial, Atlanta members of the association, will sponsor the event, which will be held February 21, 22 and 23.

N. G. I. C. Meeting Called Thursday.

A committee meeting of the North Georgia Interscholastic conference is scheduled at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at Fulton High school.

Details for the annual basketball tournament, scheduled for Russell High's court at East Point, on February 14, 15 and 16, will be completed at the Thursday meeting.

MILLSAP BEATEN.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 5.—(AP)—In a nip-and-tuck battle, the Birmingham-Southern cage team won a 28-25 victory over the Millsaps Majors, here last night in the opener of a two-game series. The local team got away to an early lead but the Majors fought back to end the half, 18-all.

Did Most for Baseball in 1934, Did Dizzy Dean

Jerome Dizzy Dean, great right-hander for the St. Louis Cardinals, is shown with the plaque awarded him at the dinner of the Baseball Writers' Association in New York city. The plaque signifies that Dean did more for baseball in 1934 than any other player. Now Dean is engaged in a spirited salary fight with the Cardinal management. He wants more than simply glory and feels he has earned a substantial raise. Associated Press photo.

GEORGIA BEATS AUBURN, 33-29

Tech Five Will Face Plainsmen Tonight at City Auditorium.

By Bill Ray.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 5.—Working a smooth passing offensive attack that kept the Auburn Tigers baffled until late in the second half, the Georgia Bulldogs had little difficulty in defeating Auburn, 33 to 29, in Woodruff hall here tonight before 2,200 spectators.

Coach Rex Enright's Bulldogs responded to the stirring leadership of Frank Johnson, husky forward, who tied with Jo Bob Mitchell, of Atlanta, for scoring honors with 10 points. Johnson, who has been off form in the last three Georgia games, returned to his accurate goal-shooting style tonight to lead the Bulldog attack.

Although Johnson led the Georgia attack, the play of Dan Bowden, Atlanta forward, and Andy Anderson, Marietta guard, and Harry Harman, Atlanta guard, was spectacular. Each of this trio got six points for second high scoring honors. Charley Harrold, Macon sophomore, also shared in the glory of the win.

MITCHELL STARS.

Jo Bob Mitchell, Tiger forward, and Cleve Brown, guard, were the outstanding players for Auburn. Mitchell tied with Johnson for scoring honors with 10 points. Brown, High Rodders and Country Barnes came next in the Auburn scoring with five points each.

It was a smoother passing quintet that defeated the Tigers here tonight. Coach Ralph Jordan's squad left the game for Atlanta. They will play Georgia Tech at the city auditorium tomorrow night.

MAKE FOUL SHOTS.

Georgia profited from experience in Atlanta when Tech defeated them by the free throw route. Out of 11 foul shots the Bulldogs missed only two throws to score nine points on free tosses.

Tech Plays Final Home Game Tonight.

The Yellow Jacket basketball team of Georgia Tech will make their last appearance of the season before the home folks tonight at 8 o'clock at the auditorium when they meet the Tigers of Auburn.

Coach Munderoff's fighting crew of four sophomores and one veteran, the Birmingham-Southern cage team won a 28-25 victory over the Millsaps Majors, here last night in the opener of a two-game series. The local team got away to an early lead but the Majors fought back to end the half, 18-all.

New Diamond Erected For Cracker Training

Gil Murphy, Former State Leaguer, in Charge of Conditioning Daytona Park.

By Jack Troy.

Gilligan Murphy, former Florida State league catcher, stood in out of the wind at Daytona Beach and watched a crew of laborers at work rebuilding the island diamond on which the Crackers will train in March. Murphy is in charge of building the new diamond. He's an expert in that line. As a ball player Murphy was considered pretty good. But as a diamond builder he is regarded as equally proficient.

"We're going to have a real training camp for Eddie Moore and his boys when they come down," Murphy said. "You can take it from me that they won't return home to play on a better field."

Murphy has played a lot of baseball on the Burgoyne island field. For years he played there as a member of the Daytona Beach club in the old state league and later as a semi-pro.

Murphy had heard about the plan of having the Crackers train each day as the tide was going out. He wondered about it. "Montreal and Newark have trained here and they worked out both in the morning and afternoon; and I know they didn't know whether the tide was in or out."

"Sometimes the wind blows across the park here but the tide has nothing to do with it. And there is a big difference in the time of river and ocean tides. Which tide are they talking about? They can't avoid both of them."

"Anyway, there will be no trouble with any wind that might come from the river or ocean tides. I know from years of playing experience here that it really doesn't make any difference when the Bulldogs lost to Tech, 32 to 27. From the first of the game Georgia was out in front, never to be tied by the hard-playing Tigers."

Coach Ralph Jordan's squad left here tonight immediately after the game for Atlanta. They will play Georgia Tech at the city auditorium tomorrow night.

The city is making preparations to make the stay of the Crackers both pleasant and comfortable. And the diamond will be in tip-top shape for the team.

Irish Gil Murphy is taking care of the team. The Crackers will establish headquarters at a beach hotel across the river where Chinese food is a specialty. A few of the boys may return with pigstails.

ROCHE KAYOES MASKED MARVEL

Whitey Hewitt and Helbig Wrestle To Draw on Exciting Card.

By Jack Troy.

All ten nights in the barroom were compressed into one at the auditorium Tuesday night when Darv Roche, husky Pennsylvania miner, climaxed a 40-minute brawl by knocking his opponent, the Red Demon from Chicago, cold as a wedge with a blow from the timekeeper's gong. The Demon was carried from the ring and was unable to return, the match being awarded to Roche.

In the one-hour semi-final Whitey Hewitt, the bad man from Memphis, wrestled to a draw with Ed Helbig, big Californian, who was making his first appearance here. Hewitt resorted to his usual rough tactics, but Helbig proved a fast and resourceful grappler and neither man was able to score a fall. The opening bout between Ed Williamson and "Nertz" Harbin was declared no contest and the scheduled match between Tiny Ruff and Jimmy Colfield was called off when Ruff failed to put in an appearance.

The Red Demon, who still might be any tough guy from Chicago except Al Capone, lost no time in going to work on Roche with kicks, knees, fists and hair-pulling which proved especially effective when combined with a side headlock. Roche was at first slow in retaliating but did some damage on his own account with terrific armlocks and some flying tackles that swept the Demon to the canvas.

Confusion reigned in the last few minutes of the match. The excitement started when Roche was hurled from the ring and kicked out again on his attempt to return. Enraged at last, Roche picked up a chair and felled the Demon. He then grabbed the timer's gong, clambered into the ring and smashed it squarely across the Demon's skull. That worthy promptly went dead to the world and Roche had only to lie on him to take the only fall. From now on, as far as Atlanta fans are concerned, he will be known as Darv (King-Gong) Roche.

It was announced that George Zaharias has accepted terms for a bout here next Tuesday night, February 12, and an effort will be made to find a suitable opponent for the famous Greek villain.

DICK IS RE-NOMINATED HEAD OF CAPITAL CITY

Club Members Will Vote on Nominees Today; Mem- bership Increases.

Jackson P. Dick, Georgia Power Company official, Tuesday night was nominated for re-election as president of the Capital City Club at the annual meeting of members at the city clubhouse.

John L. Westmoreland was nominated for re-election as vice president, and W. T. Perkerson was nominated for re-election as secretary-treasurer. Major Clark Howell Jr., J. S. Sheppard Kennedy and Albert E. Thornton were nominated for election as directors for three-year terms succeeding R. Clyde Williams, Thomas H. Daniel and F. M. Spratt.

Members will vote on the nominees today, the ballot boxes being open at the club from noon until 5 o'clock tonight. Nomination is tantamount to election.

Reports by President Dick and Secretary Perkerson revealed that the club was enjoying good business and that the membership had been increased. A comfortable profit for the year was shown.

W. P. Timmie, who for 25 years has served as manager of the club, Tuesday night was given a vote of thanks and good wishes for his 26th year in that capacity.

HELLER EXTRADITION TO BE SOUGHT BY U. S.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—An effort to bring Nathan Heller, now in custody in Havana, into United States jurisdiction to face charges that he harbored Alvin Karpis, outstanding public enemy, will be made by the department of justice.

Officials said today they were uncertain, however, as to the procedure. They explained that Cuba might deport Heller, or if not, that extradition would be sought by the United States.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (adv.)

Shawn and Company of Dancers To Appear Here Thursday Night

Ted Shawn and his men dancers will be in Atlanta Thursday. They will appear at the Woman's Club auditorium, at 1150 Peachtree street, at 8-15 o'clock that night in a program of modern dances that have proven the sensation of every city which has yet enjoyed the privilege of seeing them on their present season tour.

Of special interest to Atlanta is the fact that Foster Fitz Simons, Atlantan, is a featured member of the company. Young Fitz Simons is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Fitz Simons, of Park Lane. He is a musician, a composer, playwright, poet and writer. He graduated at the University of North Carolina last June and during his undergraduate years there achieved considerable distinction by his writings for the stage.

Several of his short plays have been produced by the university group of players and he has won several playwrighting contests of national scope.

It is Fitz Simons' ambition to make playwrighting his life work, and he has accepted Ted Shawn's dance merely as a temporary activity to prepare himself, physically, technically and financially, for the career he wishes to make for himself.

Dancing, such as Shawn demands from his company is work that would exhaust the physical resources of a coal miner or a football player in a few minutes. It calls for a perfect physical development and muscular control that is achieved only after long months of the most rigorous practice at the Shawn summer farm in New England.

Young Fitz Simons, when he comes to Atlanta, will see a recently completed portrait of himself by Kitty Butler, probably the outstanding young portrait artist in Atlanta today, which was recently completed. It is now at the Butler home.

Tickets for the Ted Shawn dance recital are on sale at Davidson-Paxon's and also at the Woman's Club, or they may be obtained at the door of the auditorium on Thursday night.

More Clear Weather Scheduled for Today

Fair and slightly warmer weather was expected in Atlanta early this morning, while a slight drop in temperature was predicted for this afternoon by Forecaster George W. Mindling. The temperature extremes were expected to range from 32 to 45 degrees.

A warm sun beamed down on the city Tuesday afternoon, sending the mercury up to a maximum of 56 degrees. The minimum temperature recorded during the day was 29 degrees. Fair weather with little change in temperature was predicted for Georgia today, following a slight cold spell Tuesday which blanketed southern states with frost as far south as Miami.

A change to warmer was reported in the central part of the country, with the temperature recorded in Chicago Tuesday morning being higher than that recorded in Atlanta. Snow has occurred extensively from Minnesota to New York and southward into West Virginia.

ALL BORN CRIMINALS, DR. OWENSBY ASSERTS

Atlantan Addresses Southern Neuropsychiatrists at Memphis Meet.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 5.—(AP)—All persons are born criminals, says Dr. Newdigate M. Owensby, of Atlanta.

His contentions were set forth here today in an address before the Southern Neuropsychiatric Association, of which he is secretary.

"All infants are abnormal and have many recognized unsocial traits that can only be corrected by proper training," Dr. Owensby declared.

"And as a matter of fact, we are all born criminals and only those who receive proper training become law-abiding adults. No infant recognizes property rights of another, but will take anything that pleases his eye."

There is no case recorded in medical literature, where an infant entered the world with a book on laws, morals or even etiquette under its arm," the Atlantan continued. "We are all born criminals."

Dr. W. S. Farmer, of Nashville, superintendent of the Central State (Tennessee) hospital, told the specialists in mental and nervous diseases that laws should be enacted requiring all defendants in criminal cases to submit to examination by a psychiatrist.

New Orleans probably will be awarded the 1936 convention of the association, leaders of the group said today.

MISS DOWLING LEADS BALL TICKET SELLERS

Miss Juliet Dowling, of 1096 North Emory road, and a representative of the Women's Business and Professional Club, is Atlanta's ace ticket seller. It was revealed Tuesday when the final tally of tickets sold for the Roosevelt birthday balls in Atlanta was made.

The Georgia Woman's Democratic Club was awarded the silver trophy offered by Jackson P. Dick, chairman of the president's birthday balls in Atlanta, to the organization selling the most tickets to the balls.

Mrs. M. I. Marks was awarded the individual prize for the member of that organization who sold the greatest number of tickets.

Announcement of total receipts from the ticket sale was not forthcoming Tuesday pending a check of the records, it was stated.

MAN HELD IN PASSING OF COUNTERFEIT BILLS

Richard R. Baker was placed under $10,000 bond in the court of United States Commissioner E. S. Griffith Tuesday afternoon, after admitting charges of passing counterfeit $20 bills. Baker was placed under a $5,000 bond in Columbus Monday, after admitting passing 13 counterfeit $20 bills in that city.

Baker was arrested at Alabama and Pryor streets in this city Saturday afternoon by Cecil H. Jones, secret service agent, after he had attempted to pass one of his counterfeit bills to the Ellsworth's shoe store at 72 Alabama street. He later admitted that he successfully passed a bad $20 bill at the Irving Hat Shop at 17 Peachtree street.

U. S. Arrest 6 in Drive Against Moonshiners

Six men already have been arrested and three more were expected to be in the hands of authorities by this morning, in an effort by officials of the alcohol tax unit to break up one of the largest gangs of moonshiners and whisky smugglers in the south, S. E. Tuttle, district supervisor of the unit, announced Tuesday.

All those arrested are charged with a conspiracy to defraud the United States government of revenue on whisky and smuggled alcohol. They are slated to appear for a preliminary hearing in the court of United States Commissioner E. S. Griffith at 10 o'clock this morning.

Federal agents have estimated that nearly 2,000 gallons of liquor, eight automobiles and two trucks have been seized from this gang in the past six months.

Otis W. Wood, of Alpharetta, formerly of Atlanta, has been named as the leader of the bootleg ring and is among those already arrested. It is thought that his headquarters have been in Atlanta most of the time, although the alleged gang has been operating through Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia. Others under arrest are Mrs. Ethel Bolling, Harry Stovall, Frank Bearden, Lloyd F. Bailey and Minny Wood.

DOOMED NEGRO BACK IN JAIL AT JACKSON

CLEVELAND, Miss., Feb. 5.—(UPI)—Tried, convicted and sentenced to hang within the space of 11 hours yesterday, James Coyner, giant negro ghoul, was back in Hinds county jail at Jackson, Miss., today.

His trial, one of the most speedy in history, was consummated quickly under protection of more than 600 national guardsmen. A crowd of more than 2,000 persons congregated about the small county courthouse, but no disorders occurred.

Hitler, Ex-Crown Prince Talk "Pressing Political Business"

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler today met the former kaiser's eldest son, former Crown Prince Wilhelm, at his home in Berlin.

The interview, held to be extremely significant, took place at the chancellery, the propaganda ministry said. Earlier rumors said Hitler dined with Wilhelm at his apartment.

What the two talked about could not be ascertained, although it was intimated they discussed "pressing political business."

A "polite visit" was the phrase the propaganda ministry used to describe the interview. Attaches at Wilhelm's palace confirmed the fact that the meeting took place, adding that the crown prince was not at home tonight. Beyond that they would not go.

If Hitler entertained Wilhelm at his apartment, it was the first time the two had met since the kaiser's abdication. Close friends of both have been trying to bring them together of late, it is known.

5,000 Attend Funeral Of Slain Strike Figure

ROSSVILLE, Ga., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A crowd estimated by police at 5,000 jammed the Rossville arena, labor union meeting place, here today as five preachers conducted a public funeral service for Columbus (Pink) Walker, asserted sympathizer killed Sunday in a new outbreak in the Richmond-Hooper mills strike.

Two American flags and the banner of the United Textile Workers were raised from a rostrum in the center of the arena, which is used for boxing and wrestling matches as well as for a meeting place. On it was Walker's flag-draped casket, banked with flowers.

Burial took place in the National cemetery, and traffic officers estimated that several hundred cars followed the hearse along the seven-mile route. No disorders were reported either at the Richmond mill here or at its Daisy and Soddy (Tenn.) plants, where strikes also are in progress.

Walker was shot to death Sunday as he and a companion called at the home of a mill worker who refused to leave his job to join in the strike. The worker, listed as Talmadge Lindsey, was charged with the shooting, Sheriff J. C. Keown, of Walker county, Georgia, to whom Lindsey surrendered, said.

Arrangements for sales and distribution in more than 60 cities have now been made by the company, which is seeking a national market for the product. Newspapers are to be used exclusively for advertising.

Senate Body Approves Sykes' Nomination

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—The nominations of six members of the federal communications commission, including Chairman Eugene O. Sykes, of Mississippi, were approved today by the senate interstate commerce committee.

Sykes' appointment for a seven-year term was opposed by Senator Bilbo, democrat, Mississippi.

The other commissioners, whose nominations were approved without objection, were: Thad H. Brown of Ohio, for six years; Paul Walker, of Oklahoma, for five years; Norman Case, of Rhode Island, for four years; Irvin Stewart, of Texas, for three years, and George Henry Payne, of New York, for two years.

GANG FUNDS ARE PAID TO BONDING COMPANIES

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 5.—(AP)—John Dillinger, Harry Pierpont and Charles Makley, midwest gunmen, are dead, but their capture here more than a year ago echoed in superior court today. The $245,829 in currency taken from them was paid to various bonding companies that brought civil actions to recover the funds.

Pressure' on F. D. R. Bared in Arms Quiz

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—A shipbuilding firm that sought preferential, diplomatic and gubernatorial pressure to keep down competition was described today to the senate munitions committee.

Clinton L. Bardo, bulky, white-haired former president of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, identified for the committee a cluster of letters he had written to Governor A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, now United States senator.

Moore was described as having communicated with President Roosevelt and Postmaster-General Farley to block $25,000,000 loan requested by Gulf Industries, headed by Laurence R. Wilder, to fit it for engaging in naval shipbuilding at Pensacola, Fla.

It was the committee's inquiry into the company's effort to secure shipbuilding contracts in Brazil that brought evidence concerning an attempt to have Ambassador Hugh Gibson of Miami, Fla., pressure American cruisers into the harbor of Rio de Janeiro as drummer's samples.

ALFRED RICE & SON TO HANDLE CLEANER

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 5.—Appointment of Alfred Rice & Son, 412 Lenox street, Atlanta, Ga., as local representative for Lazy Man's Cleaner, a new trade-marked house hold cleaner, has been announced here by K. H. Baer, vice president in charge of sales of the Founders Paint Co., Inc., Milwaukee.

Former Mais Pal Attacked in Prison

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Arthur "Dutch" Minskas, whose state's evidence helped send his pals Robert Mais and Walter Legenza to the electric chair, was attacked by three convicts today who unsuccessfully attempted to stab him to death.

Minskas, well aware of his unpopularity with the convicts since he was the first to testify against them in a 35-year term for his part in the crime for which Mais and Legenza died, defended himself with a knife blade. He stabbed one of his attackers, Charles Panella, in the abdomen, and escaped himself unhurt.

Lewis' Story "Babbitt" On Screen at Georgia

"Babbitt" Sinclair Lewis' best selling novel, now produced in screen form, opens today at the Georgia theater for a three-day run, with Alvin MacMahon and Guy Kibbee in the leading roles. The book was read and enjoyed by millions and the film version of small-town life should have a tremendous appeal to all sorts of audiences.

It depicts, in colorful and picturesque way, the foibles of a fairly successful businessman so convinced of his own righteousness that he falls an easy prey of a scheming banker and politician and later is victimized by a designing widow who punctures his egoism and nearly causes his ruin.

Guy Kibbee has the title role, with Alvin MacMahon as his wife, who understands both his conceits and the warm heart underneath. Claire Dodd has the role of the widow to whom Babbitt boasts of his financial acumen as he tells her of his love life.

Ralph McGill and Jake Harris Celebrate Joint Birthday Date

By Sally Forth.

TWO of the most charming gentlemen it has ever been Sally's privilege to know have the same birthday. Before you let your imagination run riot and you hazard the wrong guess, they are Ralph McGill and Jake Harris, who elsewhere in these columns is designed as Joel Chandler Harris Jr. And in case you are interested, yesterday was their birthday. For some time it has been the custom for Jake and Ralph to celebrate their birthdays jointly. So Mrs. McGill planned a surprise party for them. Ralph, it seems, was down at one of those swanky south Georgia plantations where they do nothing but eat quail and swap yarns about who has the best dog or who caught the biggest fish. (See "Break O' Day" for who told the biggest yesterday).

He didn't get back till toward midday, so he was not on to all the elaborate preparations being made at the McGill menage on Martina drive. That is, he was not on till Jake breezed over to his office in the late afternoon to tell him that "something was going to happen." How Jake found out, nobody knows—but how does Jake ever find out all the things he knows?

So the party was not a surprise after all—not that it made any difference, for it would take more than that to make one of Mrs. McGill's famous parties fall flat. And there were all the fascinating birthday party features, such as a huge cake with oodles of candles—there being two birthdays to celebrate, you know. The presents were distributed by Father Time—not that there was anything significant in that, heaven knows, not especially when you consider that role as played by Roby Robinson—Roby in a long beard, a long robe, and a scythe in his hand.

Quail on toast served as the piece de resistance for the delicious dinner, the birds having been sent especially for the occasion from the Robert Woodruff plantation, Ishaway, down near Albany. The hosts invited to join in the fun with the honor guests Mr. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bird, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Snyder and Roby Robinson.

IMAGINATION, says Mr. Webster, is the picturing power of the mind. Gather that power and try, if you can, to see a large flat basket filled with exquisite camellias exhibited yesterday at the Garden Center located at Rich's. Looking at those flowers, waxlike in their perfect formation and color, one saw in a fanciful mood all the romance, glamour and beauty of a south made famous in song and story. A south in which beautiful ladies received colorful camellias from admirers and wore fragrant blossoms gathered from their gardens in their hair.

That basket with its 14 blossoms recaptured and held all that beauty, and it represented a carefree handful of similar exquisite flowers which fill the greenhouses located at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Cates on Peachtree road. Mrs. Cates and her brother, Phil Shute, maintain the greenhouses in which is said to grow the largest collection of camellias in this section of the south. Begun five years ago as a hobby, the growth of the flowers has far surpassed the original idea of Mrs. Cates and Mr. Shute when they transplanted a small plant which grew in the yard of their childhood home in West Point, Ga.

Pale pink in color, it is rather singular that the first that should grow in the greenhouses here is a species of the original camellia known as rosea. It is one of over a hundred plants which grow in the modern greenhouse at the rear of the Cates Peachtree road estate. The 14 varieties on display were plucked from plants which grow from eight inches to eight feet high, and which represent varieties characteristic of their particular locale, having been collected from south Georgia, Mobile, Augusta, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Mrs. Cates, a member of the Iris Garden Club, received many compliments yesterday on her display at the Center. When Sally was there she had the pleasure of seeing—not only Mrs. Cates, but Mrs. Robert H. Martin, Mrs. Herbert Oliver and Mrs. Frank Spradlin, hostesses for the Iris club for the day.

Speaking of garden clubs, it is interesting to know that in Canton today Mrs. L. L. Jones is entertaining the Etowah Garden Club at an antique silver tea in celebration of the club's sixth anniversary, which, incidentally, was organized at the home of today's hostess. At all things of importance and interest, Atlanta is well represented, and today in Canton its representative will be none other than charming Mrs. Robert H. Martin. Mr. and Mrs. Martin spent the past few days in Atlanta, and on their way back to their part-time home at the Tate Mountain Estates will stop in Canton overnight as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Jones Sr., latter being the newly elected president of the Etowah Garden Club.

THE crystal ball is flickering today and the figures seen therein predict a marriage in which a slender and charming belle and a dark and handsome man will play the leading roles. The only way to guess the identity of the tall and slender bride-elect is the fact that she was selected, because of her grace and beauty, to display the bridal finery in the fashion show given during her debutante year by her sister Debs.

She was ravishingly beautiful in the traditional white satin, tulle and orange blossoms, all of which goes to prove that she will not be disappointing when she dons her bridal robes to take her marriage vows. The lucky bridegroom-to-be hails from a sister Georgia city, but is pursuing his chosen profession in our midst, and he and his prospective bride will live in Atlanta.

ALTHOUGH the beaux arts ball was staged in New York, personages well known to Atlanta socialites took part in the gorgeous episodes at the regency ball given in the grand ballroom suite of the Waldorf-Astoria last week. Frances Gurr McLanahan impersonated the Countess of Lauderdale, her gown redolent of the empire period in France. It was made of yellow satin, trimmed with black velvet bow knots, and the color offset to perfection her exotic beauty. The New York Times of last Saturday published a charming likeness of Martha Hall, wearing a regency costume, and a poke bonnet trimmed with ostrich. Martha is the pretty namesake granddaughter of Mrs. John S. Owens, and her mother is the former Miss Charles Owens, of Atlanta.

G. H. S. Alumnae Association Meets Tuesday, Feb. 12

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Feb. 5.—A marriage of interest to Atlantans which united Miss Starr Adams and Charles E. Holcomb Jr., of Atlanta, was solemnized on Sunday morning at 9:15 o'clock, in the First Presbyterian church here, with Dr. R. F. Campbell officiating. An attractive dinner party at which Mr. and Mrs. Adams, of 91 Unadilla avenue, in Kenilworth Park, she is a graduate of Asheville Senior High school and attended the North Carolina College for Women at Greensboro.

The groom attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Oglethorpe University in Atlanta. Mr. Holcomb is connected with the Public-Bamford theaters and was formerly located here. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Holcomb, prominent residents of Atlanta.

The lovely bride was given in marriage by her father, Orlando E. Adams. She was gown in an aquamarine blue ensemble trimmed with blue fox fur, and worn with brown accessories. A shoulder spray of gardenias completed her costume.

After the ceremony Mr. Holcomb and his bride departed for a wedding trip, at the conclusion of which they will reside in Bristol, Tenn., where the groom is assistant manager of the Paramount theater.

Miss Prater, Fiance Are Honor Guests.

Miss Elsie Prater and her fiance, Kenton Bruce Higgins, whose marriage will be a social event of Thursday, were honored Tuesday evening at the dinner party at which Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawless and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Meredith were co-hosts at Brookhaven, the Capital City Country Club.

Dinner was served at 7:30 o'clock in the ballroom of the club, after which dancing was enjoyed. The table was covered with a white satin cloth and was centered by a mound of white roses and lilies. On either end were silver candelabra holding white burning tapers. Covers were placed for a limited number of friends of the honor guests.

Miss Prater was beautifully gowned in white crepe offset with rhinestone straps. Completing her costume was a bouquet of violets. Mrs. Lawless wore black crepe trimmed in sequins and Mrs. Meredith was gowned in green crepe with a bodice of sequins.

Miss Prater was honored yesterday at the luncheon at which Mrs. Tyne Jones Jr., of Canton, Ga., entertained at the home of her mother, Mrs. T. C. Law, in Ansley Park. Pale pink roses and narcissi graced the luncheon table where covers were placed for the honor guest, and Misses Barbara Prater, Boyce Loke, and Mesdames Dave Miller, Martin Kilpatrick, James Randolph Brown, James Therrell and Fritz Orr.

Amoma Class Feted.

H. D. Florence entertained the officers and group captains of the Amoma Class of the Baptist tabernacle at her home, 1567 Melrose drive, S. W., recently.

Supper was served, after which the business meeting was held and plans made for the coming month. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Florence was surprised with many useful gifts.

Those present were: Mesdames R. E. Weinmeister, E. B. Goodwin, H. A. Allen, H. D. Florence, Frank Lee, Alex. Acree, I. C. Walters, Ray Bock, Lewis Skidmore, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Sutton and Judge and Mrs. E. M. Underwood; Misses Alma Wade, Nancy Haddock, Ethel Purcell, Inna Proctor and R. Irving Gresham. George Winship, Hugh Trotter, H. A. Phillips, H. H. Alexander, James Barron, Henry Muench, Reid Hunter, Frank Beck, Herbert Choate, George T. Marchmon, Colonel F. J. Dixon and Dr. Ellis Fuller, Dr. A. V. Henry, Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, Dr. Harvey Cox and Dean Raimundo de Ories.

Junior League Names Mrs. Harris Chairman of Nominating Group

Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris Jr. was named by Mrs. Claude McGinnis Jr., president, as chairman of the nominating committee of the Junior League at the meeting held Tuesday at the Piedmont Driving Club. Mrs. William Ogden was the other member of the committee appointed by Mrs. McGinnis, and Mrs. Bruce Woodruff, Mrs. Ralph Paris and Mrs. Preston Arkwright Jr., were the members nominated from the floor.

The league voted upon the advisability of opening clubrooms to be used as a future place of meeting for the organization. The president, Mrs. McGinnis, will appoint a committee to investigate every phase of the question.

Reports of committee chairmen featured the remainder of the meeting. Mrs. Richard Garlington, chairman of the hospital committee, made an interesting report for her committee, and introduced a young boy who is a patient at Eggleston hospital and for whom the league has furnished clothes. Mrs. Dan Conklin, chairman of the arts and interests committee, told of two exhibits which the league will sponsor at Rich's, Inc. The first is an exhibit of pottery making which will open on Monday and will continue throughout the week. The history of the pottery will be given with illuminating illustrations of the art of pottery making with a potter wheel.

The second will be an exhibit of rare old pieces of Wedgwood china, collected at the Wedgwood factory. This exhibit will likewise be accompanied by an illustrated history of the china. Both exhibits will be under the personal supervision of Miss Rachel Neely, in charge of the china department at Rich's and valued member of the league.

Mrs. Preston Arkwright Jr. made the report for the thyroid clinic in the absence of the chairman, Mrs. Robert Whately. Twelve Junior League members are taking the course offered by Dr. Henry Forer in his thyroid clinic at Grady hospital, six of whom are taking the technician's course. Mrs. Murdoch Egan, as chairman, made the report of the Marionette committee.

FOLLIES GIRL

By MARGARET CORHAM NICHOLS

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

After graduating from the Reddville (Va.) High school, Sherry Ross lives with her family until the local bank fails and her father loses his job. A New York girl visiting Reddville had taught her to dance and told Sherry she thought she should be able to get on the stage. Sherry goes to New York, gets a job with the Follies and shares a one-room apartment with another Follies girl, little blond, ambitious Janey Vines. When Sherry sees Tony Arnold, a little blond, a star of the show, she thinks she has never seen such a good-looking man as this playboy son of a wealthy old Boston family. At a night club Tony sees Sherry with Janey and two other girls. He is attracted to Sherry and takes her home in his car, tries to kiss her, then takes her to a supper club. At her apartment later he says she should have better living quarters and better clothes. Indignantly she tells him she is working for a living. Next day he is apologizing for last night's conduct. Hilda enters with a middle-aged man, they leave, and at his suggestion go to his apartment. Tony tells her he is a very strict code. NOW GO ON WITH STORY.

She did not say, "He asked me to marry him." Those words belonged to her!

Janey was serious. "You do things like that to men. Well, you know what you're doing. I won't argue. My mother says there's always one good woman in every man's life."

"Suppose he lets you down?"

"That wouldn't be so bad," said Sherry, "as my letting him down. He's like a little boy. I couldn't hurt him."

"Women are like that."

As they were leaving the apartment, the telephone rang.

"It's the reformed playboy," said Janey.

"Sherry?" Tony's bright voice. "I've gone and done it. I called father, got him out of bed, and staggered him with the news. He was delighted but he thinks it's just a new whim. He told me to go see a chap."

"That's fine, darling."

"But how can you ever get up in the middle of the night like this?"

"When can I see you?" he asked.

"I don't know. Rehearsal all day and probably all night. Boston tomorrow."

"That's awful. What time does your train leave tomorrow?"

"About noon."

"In the morning with you."

"In the morning," said Sherry. "The rehearsal started at eight but no longer distressed her. 'My part,' she told Janey sarcastically, 'is so big. Rehearsal today went along smoothly. Hilda was supremely self-confident. Dwight Kent, the tall playwright, her latest annexation, beamed from the sidelines. Murray scowled more ferociously than ever but he, too, was confident. He gave them their last directions and told them to get some sleep."

"Just try to," said Janey as they were leaving the theater, "with Tony camped on our doorstep first thing in the morning."

That night they packed. "I hate to leave the joint," said Janey. "I'm attached to it. When Tony comes in the morning, I'll get out. I've got some shopping to do. I need things."

"Thanks," said Sherry, packing furiously, not thinking of the show but of the morning.

He called for her about eight o'clock and they went to breakfast together. Tony looked bright if a little sleepy. Sherry's weariness was hidden.

"Now tell me," she said, putting down the glass of orange juice. "I went to bed at ten last night. I couldn't sleep it was so early. But, darling, I've got this advertising job. I think I'm supposed to go out on the road and decide where they're going to put billboards or something like that."

"Good-looking boys with beautiful ladies on them," said Sherry. "Tony, I think it's lovely."

"I'll tell you a little copy. My eloquence would help there."

"Your line?"

"I don't have an office of my own or a secretary. Darling, you should see the girls. I think they came out of the ark."

"Thank heaven!"

They walked back to the apartment, which looked even shabbier in the cruel daylight glare. They sat close together on the worn divan. They were happy. Tony made promises between kisses. They laughed. They were very gay but Sherry's suitcase, which had seen so many years of hard wear, was a gloomy reminder that they must part.

"This is cruel and heartless," said Tony.

"It is. We do love each other so much, Tony."

"I'll tell you," he said, "like the devil. Next week-end I'm coming up to see you."

"But we're going to be there only a week."

"I'm coming anyway. I have to see my parents."

"Don't go to the train with me," Sherry said. "People would talk. We'll say good-bye here and then you leave. I have to wait for Janey. Tony..."

Their arms went round each other again. Their lips lingered. Sherry's eyes were tragic; Sherry's misty.

"Next week-end," they said. "When Janey came in, not having had to shop at all, she found Sherry standing by the window, tears running unchecked down her cheeks. 'All aboard for Boston!'"

"I'm ready," said Sherry.

Even in conservative Boston every seat in the theater had been sold and people were turned away from the box-office. Inside the entrance were photographs of beautiful girls, thinly clad. There was a photograph of Sherry Ross, about which young men gathered and exclaimed, "This one's a honey! Look at her, boy!"

It was 20 minutes before the curtain arose. In the dressing room the girls put on the last touches of make-up.

Hilda gave herself an admiring glance in her mirror, seeing also the profusion of flowers about the room. Dwight had sent most of them. Dwell on a day, it was a successful and brilliant. He wanted to marry her. What had happened to Tony? Dwight might be successful and brilliant, but he wasn't Tony. There was no one like him. He had not sent flowers.

Sherry, more nervous than she would admit, patted her dark hair. Tony—Tony! She had talked to him long distance that day and something queer and wonderful had happened inside of her at the sound of his voice.

"I'm on my lunch hour," he had said. "Working is well and the men in the office are a nice lot. Darling, I know you are going to be very beautiful tonight."

Sherry went on dressing, going over and over in her mind their conversation. "Did my flowers come?" he had asked. "Yes, they're lovely." And so on in the manner of people who are in love.

Janey interrupted her thoughts. "There's a party tonight after the show. We're invited."

"Who's giving it?"

"How do I know? Some rich guy. He picks out the girls from the pictures out front and makes out a guest list. We're on it."

"I'm not going," said Sherry.

"You've got to," said Janey. "It's one of the things you gotta do. Come on, sitting in a drafty hotel thinking about Tony is no fun."

Sherry said, "All right, but I shall be bored."

When she walked on the stage, seeing a sea of strange faces before her, she was seized by fright. She was trembling. But the terror lasted only a few minutes. She was here! It was opening night. She was in the Follies, a glorified American girl! Tony—Tony...

In one of the boxes were two men. They were neither young nor old. One was rather nondescript looking, the other had definite character and personality. He, the latter, was Carl Ghent, self-made millionaire, a native of Baltimore, a man of strength and character, a man in the public limelight. He was very different way from Tony Arnold.

About Carl Ghent there have been many stories. Some are true; some stray far from truth, for he is one of those people other people talk about in highly respectable tones. But the one thing that people do know is that he started his career as an office boy, studied, slaved, started a little, and emerged a financier, a lawyer, a shining example of integrity and brilliance, a young attractive man with experience already sufficient to fill two crowded lifetimes.

DOCTORS OF DAYS GONE BY.

III—Galen, the Wonder Worker.

An old man was sick at Rome. His name was Eudemus, and he was widely known.

The best doctor in the city, as people believed, was called to care for Eudemus; but the illness grew worse and worse. At last Eudemus said, "Tell Galen to come to me."

If the sick man had been asked to tell who Galen was, he might have replied in this manner: "He was a boy. He is only about 33 years of age, and has been at Rome only a short time. He was born in Pergamum, a famous city in Asia Minor. He has

This success marked the beginning of fame for Galen at Rome. People talked about the wonder worker Eudemus, and he was called to attend families of power and wealth. The son-in-law of the emperor and an uncle of the emperor were among his patients. He received a large sum in gold for curing the wife of a Roman consul.

When Galen was 37 years of age, Italy was visited by a plague. We do not know whether it was bubonic plague, smallpox or typhoid fever; but whatever it was, Galen lost little time in returning to Pergamum. Some persons said that he was afraid he would become sick himself.

Two years later, Galen was called back to Italy by the Emperor Marcus Aurelius; and there followed a period of 30 years in which he practiced as a doctor at Rome.

More important than his work for the royal household was the study Galen gave to the science of anatomy. He learned as much as he could about the muscles and bones of the animals and human beings. Some persons called him the wonder worker.

In the course of his studies, Galen cut up the bodies of fish, birds, pigs, bears and apes. At one time he worked on the body of an elephant; and he examined one or two human skeletons.

Galen wrote books about the body and about medicine, and his writings kept his fame alive in the centuries which followed his death. There were mistakes in the books, but they were not many. Galen died, during, or about, the year 201.

Miss Susan Todd Becomes Engaged

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—An announcement that will prove of interest to Atlantans and Georgians, because of the fact that the bride-elect's mother was born in Athens, is made today by Mr. and Mrs. Hiram C. Todd, of 130 East End avenue and Saratoga Springs, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Susan Todd, to Colonel Peter Malevsky-Malevitch, of this city and London, formerly of St. Petersburg, Russia.

Miss Todd is the former Miss Susie Lumpkin, daughter of Colonel E. K. Lumpkin, and the late Mrs. Lumpkin of Athens. Miss Todd is descended from pioneer families of the United States. She is of the tenth generation of the Todd family in America, being descended from Christopher Todd who joined the New Haven colony in the early part of the 17th century. On the maternal side, Miss Todd numbers among her ancestors Joseph Henry Lumpkin, the first chief justice of the supreme court of Georgia, and Jonathan Bryan, of Virginia.

She attended the Masters school, at Dobbs Ferry, and is a member of the Junior League and the Colonial Dames of America. She is the sister of Mrs. Maguire, of this city, and Hiram C. Todd Jr., of Saratoga Springs, New York.

Colonel Malevsky-Malevitch belongs to an old Russian family. He is the son of the late Nicholas Malevsky-Malevitch, who was a member of the Council of Empire, senator, master of the imperial Russian court and the ambassador of the Russian Empire to Japan. His mother, Mrs. Alexis Beronnikov, now living in Paris, is the daughter of the late Russian Senator Rogovitch.

After he graduated from the Imperial Lyceum in St. Petersburg Colonel Malevsky-Malevitch joined the ranks of the Preobrazhensky regiment of the imperial guard and served in the World War. He was decorated for distinguished service in the field, and holds among others, the decorations of the Cross St. George and the French Military Cross. Since 1920 Colonel Malevsky-Malevitch has lived abroad and has been active in the work of the Russian Red Cross for Russian refugees and the American Society for the Relief of Russian Exiles. He recently published an important book on Russia.

Mr. and Mrs. Post To Be Honored.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Post, whose marriage was an event of recent interest, will be honored guests Friday evening at a buffet supper at which Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Howell will be hosts at their home on Park lane, in Anale; Park. Mrs. Post is the former Miss Chastaine Cook, daughter of Mrs. J. C. Cook and the late Mr. Cook, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Howell have invited a few close friends of the honor guests for Friday evening.

NEW SHOULDERS FIND APPEALING WAYS TO CHIC

A fashion point of the dinner dress sketched today is its new décolletage. Bias seaming gives emphasis to its slim bodice, while the panels, front and back, of the skirt, give the wearer an elegant tall appearance. The trailing hem, too, shows graceful flare.

The original dress in sapphire blue crepe with gleaming metal threads is a lively choice for the woman or miss with a heavy calendar of social dates.

It's exquisitely beautiful, too, in glowing slipper satin as blue, peach or green.

For afternoons and informal evenings make it in shorter skirt length of transparent velvet, metal cloth or bright crepe de chine silk.

Style No. 977 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38 and 40 inches bust. Size 16 requires 5 yards of 39-inch material.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

(Posed by Elsie Landi.)

Here Is a Face Powder That You Should Not Miss—It's Wonderful

By MIGNON.

I don't know how many years women have been using face powder, but I'm just funny enough to believe that it will be a thousand years before they stop using it. You never can tell—with all the new fads and fancies—what will happen, but a soft, delicate skin has been an attraction since the days of the ancients, and it would take a pretty hard-boiled age to rule face powder out.

There is a new container for a fine old powder—I mean by old, made by an old firm thoroughly reliable. It is ivory. Probably it never saw an elephant, but it is some composition that is certainly a perfect imitation of ivory. I can't imagine any dressing table to which this box wouldn't lend beauty. In the middle, on top of the box, is a tiny panel in a circle, done in a very deep, dark red. The very edge of the box, at the bottom, is this same red in a thin straight line. The powder is a scent extremely popular and very, very delicate. The powder itself is very fine sifted and the whole thing is inexpensive. Of course it comes in colors to suit various complexions. As you know, women buy cosmetics through the nose. How many times I have seen them walk along a counter, pick up a package and smell it, then set it down, making a face showing either disgust, indifference or hearty approval. This is the hearty approval kind. You'll be very glad that I recommended it to you.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone Mignon at The Constitution. Please do not write and less you live outside the city, in which case enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

By FRANK MACMILLAN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Securities continued to drift along today in the "gold clause doldrums" and the preference of most traders for the sidelines was generally reflected in mild price recessions.

While the volume of stock transactions was little above the previous dull session, there was still a noticeable few high-priced shares dropped 2 points or a little more, but the list, as a whole, was only fractionally reactionary. Prime bonds, however, were on minor recessions and government obligations were steady.

Wheat lost 1-8 to 1-2 cent a bushel, while corn was unchanged to 1-4 of a cent, a bushel higher and cotton lifted 30 to 40 cents a bale. Leading currencies in the foreign exchange market lost some of their early firmness. But modest gains against the dollar appeared in both gold and silver, and the pound sterling at the close.

Turnover in equities came to 557,750 shares and the volume in bonds was similarly restricted. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks mirrored the generally narrow character of price recessions with a decline of 4 of a point at 38.

The very high-priced mining stock, Homestake, lost 7 points to close at 335, while other leaders, down from a point to 2 points or a little more, included Santa Fe at 92 3/4, Allied Chemical at 123 1/2, American Can at 112 1/4, Union Pacific at 98 1/2 and United States Steel preferred at 86 5/8.

Recessions in most leaders were confined to around 4 of a point or less. In this class were American Telephone at 104 1/4, American Tobacco at 82, Bethlehem Steel at 120 1/4, Consolidated Gas at 100 1/4, General Motors at 30 1/2 and International Harvester at 40.

SOUTH EGREMONT, Mass., (UP)—It takes more than a depression to put this Berkshire county village in the red. The town's budgeted 1934 owing nothing and $7,022 in the treasury as a surplus.

Brokers' Views
STOCK OPINIONS.
FENNER & BEANE—Under a point of interpretation is placed by the students of market techniques upon the current decline of Dow-Jones index. The index, which in 1934, in view of the relatively small speculative interest in the market, was held up by the general public, is now expected to be distinctly lower. However, a rally may be conventionally expected on the basis of recently recorded technical manifestations, but it continues doubtful for the moment that important factors of uncertainty are likely to permit such a recovery.

BEER & CO.—We are little change of the type of action witnessed in the last few days until some decision is handed down on the much-talked-of gold clause. DOBBS & CO.—Bullish. (40) The decision on the gold clause is expected to be disappointing, but it is quite possible that the better shares in this group are becoming revived.

COTTON OPINIONS.
FENNER & BEANE—Foreign as well as domestic wheat markets are awaiting the gold decision. There would seem to be a loan policy acting as a supporting buffer, but it is a position to make a much better recovery as the gold clause decision permits.

BEER & CO.—The trade is waiting the decision and price action to nothing else. HUBBARD BROS. & CO. TO DOBBS & CO.—The market continues to be a waiting affair pending the announcement regarding the gold clause. There would seem to be nothing in Tuesday's developments to justify any material change of opinion as to the immediate outlook for the market.

FURTHER LOSSES
APPEAR ON CURB

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(AP)—The lower price trend persisted on the curb exchange today and leading industrial and utility yields fractions to around a point. Trading was slightly better than yesterday.

Pepperell Manufacturing was an isolated strong spot, advancing some 5 points in a light turnover. Aluminum Company of America lost 2 points, while Mead Johnson and Swift International yielded half as much. Fractional declines occurred in Sherwin-Williams, Gulf Oil, International Petroleum and American Gas & Electric.

Transfers approximated 100,000 shares against 84,000 the day before.

Parents of Famous Quintuplets Embark on Theatrical Career

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—(P)—Mr. and Mrs. Olivia Dionne, parents of the famous quintuplets, embarked on the theatrical career today.

Max Halperin, vaudeville booking agent who brought the Canadian couple to Chicago, announced they had signed a contract to appear in Detroit and Michigan theaters on February 14 and 15.

He said they were also ready to sign a similar agreement for appearances on the stage of a Chicago movie house beginning next Friday, and were considering extending their tour to Cleveland.

Because of an understanding approved by the Canadian government, they will be "guests" of the theaters and will limit their activities to personal appearances with no acting or speeches required.

The chance to realize some monetary reward for their renown intrigued the couple from the Canadian backwoods but their immediate attention was devoted to the fascinating sights of the first city they have visited in the United States.

They thrilled to the first glimpse of the Metropolitan scene, posed for sound and still photographs and entertained a small army of reporters. Their program calls for trips to night clubs, beauty salons, horse shows, the stockyards, the art institute, interviews with impresarios. Then they will be ready for the theatrical limelight.

Two Women Are Hurt When Train Hits Auto

Two women passengers were injured when a light coupe was hurled from the tracks and overturned by a southbound freight train Tuesday night on the crossing between Campbellton road and Fort McPherson, but the driver of the automobile, a private at Fort McPherson, escaped unhurt.

Mrs. June M. Savage, 67, of 631 Dill avenue, S. E., received a scalp laceration and possible fracture of the pelvis, and her daughter, Miss Christine Savage, 26, received a scalp laceration. D. F. Peters was driver of the automobile.

Peters told police that he did not see the approaching train until the moment it struck the automobile, catapulting it as it spun around. He said that no glass was broken, the injuries to the women being caused when they were hurled against the top and dashboard of the automobile.

Mrs. Savage was admitted to Grady hospital for observation, and her daughter was treated and dismissed.

Senate Body O. K.'s 'Phone Investigation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—In action for the first time under the "liberal" leadership of Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, the senate interstate commerce committee recommended to the senate today an investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company and an expansion of the regulatory powers of the federal trade commission.

The committee reported favorably to the senate a bill recommended by the trade commission to give it broad power to prohibit "unfair or deceptive acts and practices," aimed particularly at false advertising. The commission's powers, now limited to unfair competition in interstate commerce, would also be extended to practices "affecting" interstate commerce.

An appropriation of $750,000 was proposed by the committee to permit the commission to conduct an investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and affiliated corporations, under authority of the same scope given the trade commission to make its six-year inquiry into power companies.

EMERSON HICKS NAMED DEPARTMENT MANAGER

Takes Over Enlarged Paint, Wallpaper, Tire Section at Sterchi's.

Sterchi Brothers' Stores, Inc., 116 Whitehall street, Tuesday announced the appointment of Emerson Hicks.

Mrs. Etta Fomby, of LaGrange, Ga., Tuesday appealed to The Constitution to aid in the search for her son, Ed Gilpin, 22, who she stated left his home December 27, and described him as being 5 feet tall, weighing 150 pounds, black, curly hair and brown eyes, and ruddy complexion. He has a broken front tooth and when he left home was wearing a pair of new blue overalls and a black lumberjack and gray, checkered cap.

Assistant Station Lieutenant W. E. Edleman, Detective Chief A. Lamar Poole and Detective J. Edgar Terfield Tuesday were elected, unopposed, as members of the board of trustees of the police department pension fund.

This department is located on the first floor of the Sterchi building, and Mr. Hicks' appointment is coincident with a general expansion of the regulatory powers of the federal trade commission.

Cross Sections of Life In Gate City of South

Stating that he did not tell fellow members of the Men's Bible class of the First Methodist church, Decatur, that he was a member of the backdoor and throw rocks into a dozen speakeasies, Wayne Braswell, DeKalb county constable, Tuesday said he had stolen the source stand on the street corner of any city or town in Georgia and hurl rocks into a dozen speakeasies.

Mrs. Etta Fomby, of LaGrange, Ga., Tuesday appealed to The Constitution to aid in the search for her son, Ed Gilpin, 22, who she stated left his home December 27, and described him as being 5 feet tall, weighing 150 pounds, black, curly hair and brown eyes, and ruddy complexion. Mayor and Council Reconciled, East Point's Political War Ends

A reconciliation between the mayor and city council has ended East Point's dictatorship.

A Long-Talmadge-Mussolini rule was set up in the suburban town early this year by Mayor Howard L. Carr, who was elected to the office of mayor in 1933. Carr, a former mayor of East Point, failed to elect three important members of the city council and named a new group at lower salaries.

All of which was uncalculated, said the mayor, so he retaliated by refusing to name council members—thereby paralyzing municipal business for a time. At that time he said he'd run things himself before he'd let council throw out tried and proved officers and cut all city salaries 10 per cent or more unnecessarily.

But politics, like war, can be unpleasant, with heavy guns roaring night and day, so the mayor and council got together on the matter and now East Point's municipal affairs are running smoothly.

City Clerk J. M. Harkins, Superintendent of Lights and Water George Sparks and City Attorney Harold Sheets, elected to succeed T. W. Fowler, Walter C. Hutcheon and Standish Thompson, respectively, all took office this month. Mayor Carr, who has appointed the various council committees, "One man can't be everything all by himself and run his own business, too," he observed.

But he still thinks the salary cut was unnecessary, he asserted. He and council are going to help make up for it by giving city employees vacations and by purchasing firemen's and policemen's uniforms, if possible he said.
